

E. A. Mitchell, Union Pioneer, Called Beyond

By Mrs. L. Z. Terrill
(Observer Correspondent)

UNION (Special)—A death on Saturday claimed another of Union's pioneers, Edward Alonzo Mitchell. He was born Aug. 28, 1857 at Sparta, Indiana, and was married to Margaret Ann Mullens at Coville, Kansas, Dec. 26, 1875. To this union four children were born—one daughter dying at two years of age. The others are Albert Alonzo Mitchell of Union, Mrs. Edith Warren of Seattle and Mrs. Lulu Handman of Bellingham. He also leaves one brother, W. E. Mitchell in Portland. In April, 1883 Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell started to the northwest by covered wagon. The journey consumed about five months during which they experienced all the hardships of the immigrant pioneer. They came to the Grande Ronde valley and located in Union 46 years ago. With the exception of one year spent in Portland they have spent the rest of that time here. Mr. Mitchell won a host of friends by his kindly disposition and honesty in dealing with his fellowmen. He has been a faithful member of the Methodist church for many years. The community extends sincere sympathy to Mrs. Mitchell and the other members of his family.

The Rev. H. C. Lee will conduct the funeral services from the Methodist church at two o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (Adv.)

HEALTH

HELPING HEALTH THROUGH EMOTIONS AND NOSTRILS
By Donald A. Laird, Ph. D., Sci. D., Hamilton, New York.

One's emotional attitude during illness has long been known to have a profound effect upon the speed of recovery. Physicians usually rejoice when their patients have cheerful attitudes. Since emotion is as much physiological as it is mental it is extremely important to safeguard emotional attitudes during poor health.

In preparing food for the home patient attention should be given to have the dishes attractively arranged, garnished with bits of color, and containing, so far as the illness permits, foods to which the sick member of the family is especially partial. The taste and smell sense organs from which the food gains its so-called taste appeal are usually dulled by even a slight illness, and the appetite suffers; they will eat less food than they would like to because it does not tempt their appetite.

The foods should have all the bouquet of their fragrances reach the nostrils of the one who is ill. What we usually call taste is really nine-tenths the sense of smell. Freshly prepared and hot dishes carry this olfactory bouquet of the food most potently and encourage a positive emotional attitude toward food.

Flowers serve not only to buoy up one's emotions when ill by reminding him of pleasant friendship, but their fragrances also yield further favorable stimulation by their appeal to the intimate olfactory sense—the oldest sense in mankind. When ill one usually gives off odors which are not pleasant and which are depressing even to the uninfirmed. The fresh, volatile flowers help counteract these depressing odors, in addition to covering up the odor of any smelly drugs which are being used for hygienic purposes. Flowers cheer the nostrils as well as the eyes and memories.

Several products made from paratholochenzine are now available which will supplement flowers by deodorizing surely and at the same time lend a pleasant scent of one's own choosing to the room. Small variously scented cubes of these new preparations can be changed in the patient's room from day to day so that a new olfactory treat is provided each day. There are now also water soluble synthetic aromatics which can be used in rinse waters so that the starch and soap smell of linens is replaced by a pleasant scent of several varieties. These water solubles can also be sprinkled around the floor. In these the chemist has outdone flowers in helping keep a cheerful emotional attitude in the home patient.

Physicians see encouragement for a speedy recovery in a cheerful patient. Use every means to keep cheerful!
