Cow Is Placed In Padded Stall For Study Work

By Howard W. Halescoe

DURHAM, N. H. (AP)—A perfect diet has been brought one step nearer as the result of apparatus perfected at the University of New Hampshire laboratory for animal nutrition.

The diet devices make it possible to add to the older methods of measuring food and observing its effects. The development is carried on cooperatively by Ernest G. Ritzman, research professor in animal nutrition at New Hampshire, and by Francis G. Benedict, director of the nutrition laboratory of Carnegie Institution, Washington.

The new tests depend upon the fact that energy transformations from raw materials, whether food, gasoline or coal, are subject to the same general conditions and proceed in animals and in machines.

That is, the energy in the raw materials must be broken down by burning. In the animal body this "burning" process is called oxidation, and depends upon oxygen breathed into the lungs. The rate of energy production depends upon the amount of oxygen taken in, and the lungs act as the carburetor or draft door.

The carbon dioxide exhaled is merely a residual, like smoke, passing out of a flue. In each case the heat or energy units produced are proportional to the oxygen consumed or the carbon dioxide given off.

This New Hampshire apparatus measures the amount of oxygen consumed in breathing, the carbon dioxide exhaled and the heat produced, all in connection with exact records of the diets used.

It is designed for animals, principally cows and sheep, but appears to be based on the same principle also now is used to study food requirements of man.

One of the developments is a respiration chamber, a gilded copper stable, sealed airtight, its floors heavily padded to induce restfulness.

In it cows are kept in normal comfort for as much as five days at a time. Tubes maintain the air supply. Water is furnished through valves locked against air leakage, and feed is given in a special box arranged on the principle of the latest devices enabling men caught in a submarine to escape, one by one.

From this stall the used air is drawn off and its oxygen, carbon dioxide and water content analyzed, and these afford an exact measure of the daily energy used, by the use of 75 per cent of the nutritive value of the food for energy to keep itself warm and to perform all its various physical activities.

Another stall, slightly different, is named the metabolism chamber. It also is padded, but not air sealed. It is fitted to permit exact measurement of food and water intake and of wastes.

Even invisible water vapor exhaled through the skin is calculated by weighing. The analysis in this stall also gives a measure of the animal's production of heat.

Royal Gorge To Be Spanned By Large Bridge

CANON CITY, Colo. (AP)—The famous Royal Gorge of the Arkansas river, near here, is to be spanned by a suspension bridge which will be the highest in the world.

The Royal Gorge has been noted for its famous hanging bridge, one side of which is supported by trusses from the walls of the canyon. The hanging bridge was constructed in 1879, and pictures of it have been shown all over the world as an engineering curiosity.

The span of the new bridge will be 1,053 feet above the river. It will be 880 feet long, will hang from four towers, two on each side of the gorge, and will be supported by cables weighing 300 tons.

With the exception of the flooring, the entire construction will be of steel. A highway is being constructed on the south side to connect with a road on the north side.

The highest bridge in the world at the present time is in southern France, with height of 485 feet. The highest bridge in the United States is that at Lees Ferry, in the Grand Canyon. Its height is 464 feet. The Royal Gorge bridge will be more than twice as high as those engineering feats.

HE FOUND "GOLD"
GRANTS PASS, Ore. (AP)—W. H. Russell of the chamber of commerce recently went back into the mountains with a party of friends. His friends were interested in seeking gold. When the party broke camp and came out of the hills, Russell had in his possession two rare stamps, one said to be worth $1,375 and the other, according to catalog prices, valued at $400.
