Oregon Staters Have 16 Games In Conference

OREGON STATE COLLEGE... conference basketball games... selected at the annual meeting of coaches, graduate managers and officials of the northern division in Seattle Tuesday.

referee will have final say, however, in case any disputes arise. Eileen Jenne and Al French of Portland and Gale Mix of Moscow, Ida., are the three men added to the list of conference officials. French and Jenne will handle the four-game series between the University of Oregon and Oregon State.

GRID STAR IS SOUGHT TODAY BY OFFICERS

COLUMBIA, Mo., Dec. 13 (AP)—Police all over Missouri today

sought Louis Lee Derry, former idol of two college campuses, University of Missouri backfield ace, president of the junior class—and an ex-convict. Derry, who is 25 years old, was accused yesterday of stealing clothing and jewelry from a fraternity house. Friends of the youth promised he would appear yesterday afternoon and Sheriff Clyde Bailey accepted their assurance. Derry had not been found today, however.

BUSINESS MEN LOST

ST. HELENS, Ore., Dec. 13 (AP)—A searching party was beating the underbrush near La Center, Wash., today for E. O. Searberg, and R. L. Dehn, St. Helens business men, who are believed to have become lost in the woods Sunday while inspecting a mining claim.

Socialistic Society

The Fabian society was formed in England in 1888 with socialistic aims, but favoring the old "moral suasion," rather than distinctly aggressive lines.

14 GRIDSTERS AT IOWA HELD AS INELIGIBLE

IOWA CITY, Iowa, Dec. 13 (AP)—Fourteen University of Iowa athletes Thursday were announced as those hit by a previous ruling of the Hawkeye athletic board declaring ineligible all men who borrowed money from the "trust fund" which figured in the Big Ten ouster charges. Twenty-eight athletes borrowed from the fund in 1928. Williams, chairman of the Iowa eligibility committee, said, but only half that number are in school. Amounts due the fund range from $15 to $30, the money having been borrowed for tuition. Some of the men, especially those now owing less than $15, the amount of a semester tuition, have paid back part of the loans.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Fred Stington, Alabama's all-Southern tackle, is an accomplished saxophonist. He had a front tooth kicked out in a recent "Hama" game and now complains that he can't get the same results on the instrument. One-Eye Connolly bought a ticket to a recent fight show staged in Los Angeles. It was a benefit show for the newsways. Paul Neul, who booted home more winners than any other jockey on Chicago tracks this season, used to drive a mule in an Illinois coal mine. John White, Purdue's varsity quarterback, never carried the ball once in any of the Hoosiers' games. He lost it to Welch, Harmonson and Yumovich. "Taffey" Abel of the Chicago Blackhawks in the National Hockey league is the heaviest player in the loop. He weighs 210 pounds. And he's the only American-born player in the league.

Sport Slants by ALAN J. GOULD

So far as the Eastern front is concerned, the red rover of the Army platoon, Caidet Christian Keener-Cagle, has given the wild-eyed fans their last thrill. The All-American redhead still has an engagement to fill on the West Coast, at Palo Alto, before he puts away the moleskins for good. He may seize this opportunity to contribute one more stirring episode to a career that ranks with the greatest in the gridiron annals of West Point.

Cagle rounds out the All-time Army backfield, with Charley Isaly, Harry Wilson and Elmer Oliphant, a quartet around whose names most of the great gridiron legends of the military academy are erected. Of them all, Chris the Red has perhaps been the most colorful, the most spectacular, leaving an indelible stamp of individuality after four brilliant years of passing and running. Cagle's four years have seen the Army leap forward to occupy the most conspicuous position of its history in the national football spotlight. The redhead has been the greatest personal drawing card since Red Grange. In four years he has played before more than 1,250,000 spectators on the gridirons at Chicago, New York, Champaign, New Haven, Cambridge, as well as West Point. The quiet, curly-haired and pink-checked lad from Louisiana was not long in making his impression among the stalwarts at West Point. "Eight Horse Harry" Wilson was as the height of his career with the Cadets when Cagle, the plebe, first won his spurs. Wilson, in 1924 and 1927, over-shadowed his team-mate, but Cagle's speed, elusiveness and passing ability were quickly noted.

At Soldier Field, in 1926, the Navy got a few glimpses of Cagle's flying heels and so did 110,000 spectators. In the last Army-Navy game, at the Polo Grounds in 1927, Cagle added a dramatic episode to the record by his remark: "Harry Wilson is making the touch-down today," as the Cadet quarterback sought to switch signals on the goal-line. It was Wilson's last game, and he made the touch-down, with Cagle smashing ahead as interfever.

Cagle's greatest year, measured by the frequency of his long, dodging run for touchdowns, was 1925. He ran wild against Yale with a flanking exhibition, beat Nebraska with one great run and single-handedly almost overcame Notre Dame's lead in the fading moments of a thrilling game at the Yankee Stadium. Stanford swamped the Army late, but again Cagle stood out, again by sheer personal brilliancy he tore through nearly the whole Stanford team on a dash that they still talk about in somewhat awed tones at Palo Alto. Motion pictures of that famous run later revealed that at one time or another in his zig-zag course ten Stanford players laid hands on Cagle without bringing him to earth. He was stopped because he ran head-first into the eleventh and spilled himself.

This year Cagle has not gotten away so often. He was watched like a hawk, but, with the exception of the day he faced Albie Booth, the Army redhead was the outstanding player on any gridiron he stepped on. To top it all off he proved himself one of the greatest of defensive halfbacks.

They helped clear the way for... Tony Holt, Alabama's great fullback, easily ranked among the great ground-gainers of the season. He reeled off 1,555 yards altogether according to the alert statisticians. In addition to doing most of the "Hama" passing and punting.
