"Dynamite" Opens Run At State Sunday

Once called by critics the "Sizars Cecil B. DeMille," it appears that the producer-director is about to reclaim that title in "Dynamite," which comes Sunday to the State theater for a four-day run. It is his first talking picture. It is his first picture in four years to present girls, gowns and gaiety of the frivolous sort, although his early reputation was made with this type of material. "Dynamite" is said to have food for the eye in two particular sequences, one at a country club, the other in the home of Cynthia, the feminine lead. The country club sequences finds Kay Johnson and Julia Faye racing in the sensational new "hero-wheels" to determine whether Miss Johnson shall pay $100,000 or $200,000 for Miss Faye's husband, Conrad Nagel.

To provide the dramatic background for this highly modern situation, DeMille shows Charles Bickford being condemned to death and, later, a marriage of Bickford to Miss Johnson on the eve of his execution. How Bickford escapes death, and in a party in Cynthia's home, and in the cold night of which the lead is gung, completes the dramatic framework of Jeanie MacArthur's latest original.

MENUS

By Sister Mary
That the skill of the cook plays an important part in the cost of meals is an undisputed fact. The woman who can take the simplest sort of foodstuffs and cook them to perfection always can serve a "good meal" for good cooking is the first essential for good food. Next in importance to good cooking comes regard for family tastes. Adults whose food tastes already are formed cannot be made to eat foods they do not like, and the woman who tries to do this usually finds wasted food on her hands. This in turn means wasted money, time and effort. One of the surest and easiest means of economy in meal planning is the regular use of seasonable foods. Although the markets offer all varieties of produce throughout the year, the cost varies at different seasons. Long distance shipping involving the necessity of refrigeration or applied heat costs money and increases the price of foods shipped under these conditions. Very often economy is one place means increased cost in another. If the cook would save money she must usually spend time. This extra time must be spent in the kitchen or in a trip to the market. In any event she will find her time well spent for a trip to market will prove not only an economy but an inspiration for planning menus.

Extra cooking and baking done one day makes it possible to do less the following day. One-dish main courses effect a worth-while saving in dishwashing. The old-fashioned "boiled dinner," casseroles of meat and vegetables and meat and vegetable pie, are nourishing examples of one-piece main dishes that require little watching during cooking and leave a minimum of serving dishes and cooking utensils to be cleaned up after the meal.

Fuel always can be saved by making full use of the oven. A little planning makes it possible to cook almost the entire meal with the same amount of heat needed for one dish.

The following menu may suggest other combinations for oven meals. Meat loaf, scalloped potatoes, baked carrots and peas, cranberry rolls, baked apples with whipped cream, coffee.

Medics Watching Parrot Disease In Two Nations

WASHINGTON, Jan. 10 (AP)—Surgeon General Cummings of the public health service, Friday advised an avoidance of contact with recently imported parrots until officials complete an investigation of a highly fatal disease several cases of which are thought to have been contracted from the birds in Maryland.

In response to an appeal from Governor Ritchie, two public health doctors have been sent to Baltimore and Annapolis to study the condition of three parrots, critically ill with what is thought to be psittachosis or "parrot disease," the symptoms of which are similar to those of pneumonia and typhoid fever.

Dr. Cummings said he did not fear an epidemic of the disease, since it is generally believed that it is transmitted only from bird to human being, and not from person to person. He urged, however, that contact with parrots and their cages be avoided.

VETERINARIAN ILL

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 11 (AP)—Illness of Dr. N. H. Whitehill of Haldethorpe, veterinarian employed by a pet shop in Baltimore, is being watched by city health authorities in the belief he may have psittachosis or "parrot fever," Dr. C. H. Thompson Jones, city health commissioner said. The shop employing Dr. Whitehill is the same from which the family of S. S. Martin of Annapolis bought a parrot which died Christmas day and which was thought to have caused the illness of three of that family.

FOUR DEAD IN BERLIN

BERLIN, Jan. 11 (AP)—Four women were reported to have died in various parts of Germany from psittachosis (parrot disease) which already has taken several lives here.

Two of the victims died in Munich, one in Stuttgart and the fourth in Bunnensbach near Cologne. The deaths had all been previously attributed to inflammation of the lungs but were traced by physicians to psittachosis from parrots recently acquired.

The Town Doctor (The Doctor of Towns) Says

"GOOD BUSINESS" IS "INVOICING" THIS MONTH
A community is like a store—the citizens, clerks and employees, business and professional men the department heads, and the policemen the floor walkers. Whatever you do to make a living, you play as important a part in this "store" as does an employee in a mercantile establishment, be the employee a clerk, bookkeeper, cashier, window trimmer, repairman, engineer, janitor, porter, delivery boy or anybody else that works there. Every employee can and should sell the store. Regardless of position, the work that each does is relative to and reflects on all other employees.

and the store. You know how easy it is for you to get "off" a certain place because some of the employees did or failed to do something—you hold the store responsible for the attitude and conduct of all those who work there, and what is true with this "store" which is your community.

At this time of the year we hear much talk, see much advertising relative to "inventory" and "invoicing." If at no other time, now stores everywhere are "taking stock" in order that they may know where they stand—if they have lost or gained, over-stocked, or short, and to lay plans for the new year's business.

You don't think much of a business man who doesn't "take stock," not only of the merchandise he sells but of his business in general. You don't think so much of a merchant who year after year does the same things in the same old way in the same old unchanged store either, BUT if your town is a business—and it is nothing else—why shouldn't it be "invoiced" and "inventoried" that YOU might know if it lacks something which is costing you money, or if it has something that you would make you money.

Take stock of YOUR department of this "store" with the thought foremost in your mind that as you are, just so is the rest of your department and the entire "business." As you do, often the whole is judged.

Here's what you can do to start "invoicing" the "corner where you are"—if you work in a store or sell, you come in contact with many people. Get sold on yourself—make yourself and your surroundings neat and attractive, sell your customers and associates on yourself, your line and him who pays your salary, and in so doing SELL those with whom you come in contact on La Grande.

If you work in an office you, too, meet many people and have opportunities to increase your own valuation and your employer's by creating an atmosphere that invites and holds business, prestige and good will for La Grande.

If you work in a factory you have every reason to want to make La Grande a better place to live and work in, that you and yours may enjoy life and prosper.

Many towns are known by the products they make. If that part of the product you produce is just a little bit better, making the product better known and in greater demand, you make money because La Grande will be more widely and better known, which directly affects its growth, therefore affecting your prosperity.

If you earn your living by the sweat of your brow, remember this—that whether you keep steadily employed or not, at good wages or poor, depends on whether others make money with which to have done that which pays you. The demand for work you do controls the amount of money you make.

Therefore the more you do to create interest in La Grande, putting forth every effort, regardless of how small it appears to you, to make it look good, make other people think well, talk well of it, the more work and more pay will it be for you.

You can do none of these things without being sold on La Grande. You cannot be sold on it unless you know about it and know all there is to know about it. Find out about it—go to the library and ask the librarian for facts; drop in at the chamber of commerce, or if you prefer, write to those people. You will be surprised at some of the things La Grande has that you have forgotten or never knew about.

Take stock—find out what La Grande has, what it lacks, and then fit yourself into the picture to take

Knowledge Not Enough

That knowledge alone will not suffice to stamp out even a malignant disease is well illustrated by diphtheria.

Perhaps no single disease is as well known to science and as completely understood as diphtheria. We know the cause of the disease, the way it is spread, the cure and prevention.

And yet diphtheria yearly claims hundreds of child victims, a claim which is possible only because of the indifference of parents and guardians.

The disease has been known to medicine for many centuries. Its specific cause, the diphtheria bacillus, was discovered by two scientists, Klob and Loeffler.

A specific cure (a certain cure if applied only within the first three days of the disease) was discovered and produced by von Behring. More recently, through the work of Zingher, Park and others, an effective method of prevention was devised.

And yet there still are reported every year throughout the United States tens of thousands of cases of diphtheria and hundreds of deaths.

A case of diphtheria or a death from diphtheria nowadays should be interpreted as an indictment on the responsible older persons. The very largest majority of such cases easily could have been prevented by toxin-antitoxin treatment.

This treatment can be given as early as in the sixth month of a child's life. It is simple, painless, and without danger of any sort. The treatment usually is given in the form of three injections. A child so treated generally is safeguarded against diphtheria for life.

Key to Life
We know that the secret of the world is profound, but who or what shall be our interpreter, we know not. A mountain rumble, a new style of face, a new person, may put the key into our hands.—Emerson.

There is a Fashion-of-the-Month club in New York. Apparently there are some people who actually believe a fashion can really be confined to such an interminable length of time.
