TRAIN, AUTO BUS COLLIDE; TEN KILLED

The trip. The train was number X-19, a mail run.

Slowed at Crossing—Apparently the bus driver did not see the train. He is said to have slowed or stopped near the crossing and then to have driven on to the tracks.

A moment later there was a crash, followed by the screams of children. Cries of the suffering added to the horror of the scene for many minutes while rescuers gathered up the mangled bodies and started with those who still were living to the hospital at Beera.

Pathos was added to the tragedy when mothers and fathers of the dead and injured children commenced to arrive. Cries of anguish were heard as mothers found their loved ones dead or learned they had been taken to hospitals seriously injured. Many of the fathers also were unable to restrain their grief.

Rudolph Ursprung, a train conductor, of Beera, who was one of the first to arrive at the scene, said there was a freight train passing east over the crossing as the bus approached. It was believed Taylor waited for the freight train to pass and then drove his bus in front of the mail train which the freight train probably had hidden.

Among the dead were three children all of one family. They were Ilka Zelinkei, 5, her brother Vincent, 6, and her sister, Dorothy, 11.

Fourth Big Tragedy—Iland, the engineer, said, "I didn't see the bus until we hit it." The Beera crossing crash was the fourth big tragedy in Ohio within three weeks. Just 19 days ago, seven school children of Buc-Kan, Ohio, were killed at Shreve, Ohio, near Wooster, when a school bus, returning from a basketball game at night, was struck by a Pennsylvania train there. Several others were killed and more than 40 have been injured in other accidents.

the information it would be given to them.

Schafer then asked if it were not a fact that when prohibition agents became involved in a case reports on the incident were sent to the bureau for "covering up."

"I know nothing of anything like that," Mellon said, "if such a condition exists it has never been brought to my attention."

Schafer said he believed such a condition did exist among officers in the state of Washington and that he was going to move that the committee ask the prohibition commissioner for a report.

"I understand the situation in Washington is serious," Schafer declared.

Doran then took the stand and recommended the transfer. He said he thought enforcement could be made more effective by the justice department as it would make detection and prosecution more efficient.

Plumber Facing Murder Charge Knew Roosevelt

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore., Jan. 22 (AP)—On the eve of the trial of John G. Wright, Klamath plumber, charged with the murder of Sydney Darling, hotel man, some interesting facts of Wright's past life were revealed by friends.

Years ago, the man who went to trial today, was known for his feats of horsemanship and while riding the range in Wyoming was chosen to break one of the finest horses available for Teddy Roosevelt, then president of the United States.

Wright then took the horse to Washington, D. C., and remained several months caring for the president's stables. Yellowed newspaper clippings in Wright's possession tell of this part of his life.

Life on the open range lured Wright back to Wyoming where he organized a wild west show and traveled throughout the western states. Becoming prominent, he cast his lot with miners at Butte, Mont., and amassed a small fortune.

From Butte he moved to Seattle, then to Portland where he was in the plumbing and heating business. Through a bank failure he lost $25,000 and through poor investments another $20,000. He moved to Klamath Falls in 1926 and started again to regain lost fortunes. He operated a plumbing shop and later opened a skating rink. Mrs. Wright had a lease on the hotel which was owned by Darling. They have one daughter, who resides in Portland.

When faced with the charge of shooting Darling, the plumber said he had won and lost two fortunes and did not intend to have another taken from him. Much surprise testimony is expected in the trial.

Mrs. W. J. Bryan Joins Husband In The Beyond

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 22 (AP)—Mrs. William Jennings Bryan, widow of the late Democratic leader, today joined in death with her famous husband, whose constant companion in victory and defeat she was from that October day in 1884 when he led her to the altar and slipped onto her finger the ring inscribed "won 1880; one 1884."

Mrs. Bryan, whom the Great Commoner called "my mental safety valve," died last night at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Grace Bryan Hargreaves, wife of a Beverly Hills, Cal., banker. She had been suffering from arthritis for about 12 years, and her condition became suddenly worse upon her return here a short time ago from Miami, Fla., where she visited another daughter, Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, member of the congress from Florida. Mrs. Bryan was 69 years old, and survived her husband by four years.

Throughout the 41 years of their married life, her husband's career was Mrs. Bryan's career. They discussed everything together — men, events and every new political issue. She assisted him with his mail and read aloud to him while he chattered down trees for exercise. In order that she might share more intimately his thoughts and be of greater aid in his efforts, she took up the study of law and was admitted to the bar.
