Students Making Unusual Sets

Miss Strain's classes in English and dramatic interpretation at the high school are doing some clever and artistic work in the form of a project. The English students are required to choose between giving a dramatic interpretation of some character in their term book reports, or designing and constructing an original stage setting. The students of interpretation are making a study of materials and lighting of stage settings, so that this work is a part of their course. Many novel and unusual sets have been constructed. The types vary in ideas from realistic scenes to highly imaginary and futuristic ideas. A Dutch modernistic scene, a wild jungle scene, a gorgeous arena horreals idea, and an imaginary trip to Mars have been made uniquely. An apparatus for operating color lights is used in the class room to give the right effect. Original sketches of famous actors have been made, such men as George Arliss in his role as "Diarrhoel" and John Barrymore.
