ad by some improvement in flour markets.

Spring wheat markets were fairly steady with premiums for cash grain slightly firmer. Mills were competing with elevator interests, shippers and other buyers for desirable protein types at Minneapolis.

Pacific coast wheat markets followed the decline in eastern markets in futures, but cash prices held steadier and showed a decline ranging from 1c to 2c on the various classes of wheat. At the close of the market March 7th No. 1 Big Bend bluestem hard white was quoted at Portland at $1.29 and at Seattle at $1.21 per bushel. No. 1 soft and western white was quoted at Portland at $1.19 and at Seattle at $1.11 per bushel. No. 1 hard winter, northern spring and western red were quoted at Portland at $1.07 1/2, with No. 1 hard winter selling at Seattle at $1.19 and No. 1 western red at $1.89 per bushel. Export business continued dull, but sales of one full cargo and one parcel lot of approximately 1,000 tons afloat were reported to the United Kingdom during the week. Parcel sales totaling around 2,000 tons to Japan were also reported. Export flour business was negligible, but sales to Atlantic seaboard and southeastern markets by northwestern mills improved the milling demand for local wheat. Farmers were reported selling very little wheat at current quotations and country shipments were mostly from trade storage stocks. Receipts at Portland totaled 255 cars, at Seattle 99 cars, and Tacoma 115 cars, which were only about half the number received during the corresponding week last year. Exports out of Columbia river points for the season to date have totaled about 15,500,000 bushels, compared with about 18,200,000 bushels shipped out during the corresponding period last year.

California wheat markets were weak and lower. Very little wheat is left in growers' hands in Central California, according to trade reports, but prospects for the new crop are quite favorable as a result of recent rains and mild weather. Current offerings from re-sellers were easily adequate for market requirements at San Francisco, where mills were fairly active buyers as a result of a better inquiry for flour. Receipts of wheat at San Francisco since the first of June have totaled a little over 59,000 tons, or practically the same as for the corresponding period last year.

WHEAT MARKETS REMAIN WEAK

Export Inquiry Fails to Improve—Feed Grains in Good Demand.

WASHINGTON, Mar. 10.—Invisible wheat markets declined sharply during the week ending March 8th, largely as a result of the failure of export demand to show any material improvement, according to the weekly grain market review of the United States bureau of agricultural economics. Market stocks in North America continue unusually large and because of their continued slow movement into consuming channels, are a further depressing influence. Lower wheat prices influenced adversely the market for feed grains, but there was a good demand at most points and prices held generally steady except at Chicago where unusually large receipts of corn and shortage of elevator storage caused a weak market situation. Rye declined sharply because of the slow export inquiry and the relatively large stocks in store for which there is a very limited market. Flax prices also declined with other grains. Offerings of domestic flax are small but there are being supplemented by large importations of Argentine flax.

The weak wheat market situation in the United States has been brought about principally by the limited takings of foreign wheat by European buyers. Native wheats in Europe are still being utilized extensively and in some countries milling regulations have been enacted or extended to reduce imports of foreign wheat. In Germany import duties have been increased to about 6 1/2 c per bushel on foreign wheat in order to increase the use of native wheat and rye in that country. While native wheat was quoted at $1.77 1/4 at Hamburg March 7th, United States wheat would have to sell at about 9 1/2 c at that market to be equivalent in price to local grain. Native milling wheat at Paris was quoted March 7th at $1.34, but with an import tariff of 52 1/2 c cents prevailing, United States wheat would have to sell at about 11c CIF French ports to be equal in price to the native wheat. With these restrictions reducing the demand for foreign wheat, and southern hemisphere wheat still being offered in moderate volume at lower prices than those quoted by North American shippers, export sales of United States wheat continue very limited and have consisted principally of shipments from the Pacific coast and of distressed lots afloat. Argentine and Australian shipments for the week totaled approximately 5,000,000 bushels, while stocks on ocean passage are reported at about 26,700,000 bushels. United Kingdom stocks at the first of March totaled 13,600,000 bushels. Market stocks of wheat in store in the United States and Canada totaled approximately 272,000,000 bushels, or about 45,000,000 bushels more than a year ago. The increase in North American stocks, however, is more than offset by smaller stocks on farms.

Cash prices of wheat were also lower but the decline was less marked than in futures markets because of a fairly active demand for milling wheat.

Soft winter wheat was in better demand at most markets, influence erator. The flight was made over the hazardous heights from Little America, Byrd's base.

On May 9, 1924, Byrd flew out of Spitzbergen, circled the north pole and returned. Among his other adventures was a transatlantic flight which ended when his plane became lost in fog and finally came down at the water's edge off the coast of France.

Great Welcome

Thundrous enthusiasm held sway at the expedition, borne by the baroque City of New York and the steamer Eleanor Bolling, entered the harbor of Dunedin, Dunedin was the last city to bid Byrd goodbye when he set out for the antarctic in December, 1928.

Thousands of persons lined the waterfront to witness the return. Bands played "The Star Spangled Banner" and "The Conqueror Here." Scores of small craft sailed out and escorted the two ships to their docks.

Byrd's Comment

Byrd's comment on the accomplishments of the expedition was brief. He said:

"Surely the both pole flight was not more important than the flight which we discovered the new land to the east of the other side of the Ross dependency. This I have named Marie Byrd land.

"The six scientists with us worked arduously and the results should prove useful. We surveyed 230,000 square miles of hitherto unmapped country."

"To the explorers who had preceded him in the antarctic, Byrd paid tribute.

"They had difficulties to overcome," he said, "hardly more than we. These gallant men did not come after seeing the easy things they had to overcome. Because of weather and our dogs we did not undergo the difficulties and hardships of those pioneers. They deserve our utmost respect.

"Houses kept warm

"We got used to the cold and our houses were warm enough. The monotony was the worst thing we had to encounter."

Replying to an address of welcome by a representative of the government, Byrd said:

"We have been fortunate in a great many ways and without that good fortune we never would have accomplished what we did. All that we set out to do has been done.

"If I said all I think of the men who accompanied me into the antarctic, you would think I was boasting."

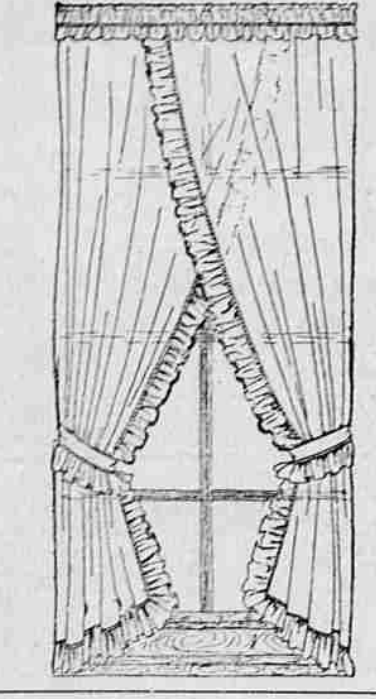

In his welcoming address the government official pointed out that Byrd had led his expedition through the long polar journey without the loss of a single life and without any severe sickness.

Other members of the expedition were asked to address the gathering. The speaker will will clean up the woodwork this new plant in about ten days and then will sail for New York via the Panama canal.
