THE INDWELLING SPIRIT—If the Spirit of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you.—Romans 8:11.

A raspberry has been named for Senator Jones, of Washington. Well, lots of people take pleasure in giving senators the raspberry.

We supposed that the tire quality in the voice of Rudy Vallee was lover's langour until it was discovered that he works 20 hours a day.

Scotland Yard had only 18 murder mysteries in 1929. according to a news item. Considering the infallibility of that famous police force, 18 mysteries seem to be a lot. But compared with murder mysteries in our own large cities, the record is perfect.

Numerous land owners in the Grande Ronde valley are emphasizing their belief in cherry growing by planting new trees. No fruit crop has proved more generally successful and several thousand cherry trees are being set out this spring to add to the thousands already productive.

One of the grotesque revelations of the week has been the announcement that a total of more than $400,000,000 is hoarded away in America outside of banks. Stockings, cupboards, old jars, mattress crannies and other hidden places are believed to be the receptacles of this surprisingly large sum. It is almost inconceivable that so much money should be secreted and kept out of banking institutions. It is easily understood, of course, that even more millions are kept out of banks for the transaction of business, but that $400,000,000 aside from this is being withheld from banks indicates that a heap of education is still necessary.

Beautiful spring days produce varied effects on people. Some of them head for the golf course. Some dig out fishing rods and count the days until the trout season opens. Some dig in their own gardens. And then there are some who climb in the car and seek out wild flowers along the highways and byways. Oregon is a beautiful country in spring and few there are who do not sympathize with groups and individuals who would get closer to nature by roaming the mountain woods these days. Wild flowers are abundant—and tempting. Always more lovely in their native haunts than in a bowl on the living room table, it is nevertheless hard to keep from picking a few to show how far spring has advanced. It's an impulse that can be excused, but be careful where it is indulged. Keep well back of the road, off the property of the state highway. Because flowers are valued highly in Oregon; their roadside beauty is officially appreciated and a law protects them. Those farther back (if property owners do not object) are out of view from the highway and no serious objection could be raised if they are picked carefully. Those close by the road are to be enjoyed by all, as they should be.

MAKING SCHOOL ATTRACTIVE

All efforts to inspire school children with such love of learning that they will prefer the classroom to the open spaces have proved failures. Scientifically heated and ventilated school buildings that are architectural masterpieces, are little more attractive than the old red schoolhouses, with airtight stoves functioning in rooms either too airtight or not airtight enough.

If school days are more popular today, it is because of improved teaching, playgrounds, gymnasiums, swimming pools and competitive athletics. It is a certainty they will gain in popularity of modern invention fulfills its promise to abate a nuisance which has existed within the schoolroom as far back as the memory of the oldest living citizen can span.

No boy or girl who has attended a public school but can recall the days when pupils were appointed to collect the erasers from the blackboards, carry them outdoors and there beat them vigorously together till the dust which had gathered in them floated away in dense, ashy clouds, a part of which was breathed into the lungs of the "eraser monitor."

Today the vacuum-cleaning process can be applied to the erasers, and their sediment of crayon dust extracted from them by the janitor, quickly and harmlessly. Gradually school boards are making education safe for humanity and are at the same time striving to make it alluring. But as long as children are children, the majority of them will be like the little boy who, when asked what he did at school, replied: "Oh, I wait 'til it is out."

Schramm Backed In Astoria Case

SALEM, Ore., Apr. 9 (AP)—M. C. Wilde, a national bank examiner, and G. A. Snow, examiner for the federal reserve banks of the 12th district, came to the support of A. A. Schramm, state superintendent of banks yesterday in his contention that a charter should not be issued for the establishment of the bank of Astoria. Their testimony concluded a hearing before the state banking board to whom applicants for the new bank charter appealed when Schramm denied the charter. The board has the case under advisement.

BRITISH GIRL, 23, ENTERS LONDON BUILDING TRADE

LONDON (AP)—Margaret Mercer, a 23-year-old blonde is the latest addition to the ranks of the building trade in London.

Margaret has just passed her final examinations at the London County (County School) of Building at Brixton, where she was one of two women students among 1,200 men.

"Women seem to have more or less free access to everything except building," she said. "Everybody has said that my ambition to be a builder, as my father and grandfather before me, was a peculiar ambition, but I simply can't see it."

She admits that there are a few snags in feminine pursuit of the practical work of the trade—bricklaying, painting, and plumbing. So she is content to remain in the executive and directive end of the work.

FEWER TIN CAN SIZES URGED AS ECONOMY AID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Housewives soon may choose from considerable fewer sizes of cans in selecting preserved foods.

The department of commerce as the result of a survey undertaken at request of the National Canners' association has recommended that 27 sizes of cans be substituted for 64 now in use for packing fruits and vegetables.

It is believed that the smaller number should answer all normal requirements, and will make for more economical packing due to longer runs, with fewer changes of machinery, less idle equipment and reduced clerical overhead.

Eggs And Butter Show Weakness; Apples Active

PORTLAND, Ore., Apr. 9 (AP)—Egg and butter quotations were displaying considerable weakness in the face of accumulating supplies. Receipts of both products were much in excess of demand, but official prices remain unchanged. Some dealers shaded egg values slightly in the effort to reduce supplies. The storage movement continues.

Reviewing the fruit and vegetable market, the Portland bureau of the United States department of agriculture says:

"An active apple market is one of the outstanding features of the wholesale produce trade. Washington shipping points have increased their prices 25 to 30c per box on practically all varieties, grades, and sizes since last week. C grade apples are becoming especially scarce, and it is expected that trading will soon be confined to fancy and extra fancy apples. Winesaps comprise the majority of present trading.

"Cauliflower also registered an advance, with most sales to retailers at $1.75 per crate of No. 1 Oregon. No. 2 stock is discounted 25c per crate. Only about 1 car per day is now loaded from Roseburg.

"Onions are steady, at about $1.00 per cwt. plus sacks, to growers. Retailers are paying $1.50, with a few sales of fancy quality a shade higher.

"An unofficial report of potato storage stocks indicates about 600 cars still available in the Yakima district, and 50 to 100 cars within 100 miles of Portland.

"California asparagus is barely steady on the Portland market; northwestern stock is steady to firm at $1.65@$1.75 per dozen bunches. Quality of northwestern asparagus continued very fine.

"Local outdoor radishes are plentiful and of good quality. Local green onions, rhubarb, and spinach are also in liberal supply, and prices are barely steady."

Hobble Skirts Again? Paris Is Worried

By Diana Merwin
(Associated Press Fashion Editor)

PARIS (AP)—There are whispers, faint and elusive, that hobble skirts are a possibility of the near future at some style houses.

With 20 houses capable of launching a style upheaval turning out between them more than 15,000 serious efforts a year, you can find almost anything you look for in couturiers' salons.

It's when ideas begin to overlap and become tendencies, either at one powerful dress house or several dress houses, that the professional stylists sit up and write cables about it.

One of the trends the stylists are watching very suspiciously just now is the tendency of evening dresses to have many tiers, graduating toward the feet.

When the tiers diminished toward the waist nobody wrote much about it.

But since peplums accustomed the eye to a certain softness and fullness around the hips, hemlines have begin to shrink. Tulle tiered skirts have gone frankly tight at the ankles in a few isolated cases. They recall the pre-war pagoda dresses which led to hobbles, which led to slit skirts from which short skirts eventually evolved.

Without doubt, having led women to long evening skirts by way of picture frocks with ultra full skirts Paris is now working to suppress some of the fullness.

Use of soft materials which fall into long slender lines is leading toward long, slender lines without fullness, many a style expert thinks. The slit skirt is already resorted to in the long tight foundations over which voluminous filmy chiffon and tulle are draped.

Pessimists tell us it is only a matter of time until the drapery is removed and the long, tight skirt is reinstated.

AIRMEN PLANNING 8000 MILE TRIP

Journey, to be Non-Stop, May Take 80 to 90 Hours of Time.

NEW YORK, Apr. 9 (AP) — The longest non stop distance flight yet attempted by airmen of the United States—an 8000 mile air journey from New Haven, Conn., to Buenos Aires—is the ambitious project of two former military fliers for consummation.

The first good day of the full moon — which will be sometime about April 15—should see Lieut. Comdr. George R. Pond and Capt. Herbert C. Partridge, winging their way southward toward the southern cross in their big single motored Stinson monoplane, a plane built especially for sustained flight with a heavy load.

The flight will be non-stop but at least four and perhaps five refueling contacts will have to be made as no ship yet has been built that can take a load of fuel off the ground necessary for such a distance.

For lack of an adequate field near New Haven from which to take off with a full load the first refueling contact will be at either Roosevelt field or Newark municipal airport. From there their route carries them over Havana, for another refueling contact, across the Caribbean to Cristobal, Panama, for a possible third refueling, down the windswept, fog bothered west coast of South America to Lima, Peru, for more fuel, to Santiago or Mendoza, Chile, for another refueling contact and into Buenos Aires.

The fliers expect the voyage to take 80 to 90 hours.

Partridge, who has nursed the idea of the flight for over a year while seeking financial backing, is a war flier and for several years was a test pilot for the army. He has 1000 hours of flying. Pond is a pre-war flier, called back to active service in 1917, an experienced navigator and the counsellor for the flight of the Southern Cross from California to Australia two years ago—counted the most successful ocean flight yet attempted. He has 8000 hours of flying.

Their plane was originally built for an attempt at the world's non-refuelling endurance record. It has a 55 foot wing spread, is powered with a 425 horsepower Pratt and Whitney senior. Fuel tanks of a noted poet, acts as Gandhi's lieutenant in disobedience campaign. capacity of 1000 gallons have been installed. The plane has a cruising speed of 100 miles an hour and a service ceiling of 20,000 feet.
