GRACE GREATER THAN LAW—For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin, condemned sin in the flesh: That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit.
—Romans 8: 3, 4.

"Pins, buttons, beads, watermelon seeds, tacks and dolls' glass eyes are less harmful to babies than aunts, uncles, neighbors and friends," says the American Research Foundation in commenting on the foolish advice of these advisors to mothers. But mothers will note that pins, buttons, tacks, et al, are classed as "less harmful" and will continue their eternal vigilance against them just the same. The average mother probably figures correctly that the average infant is more likely to swallow misplaced knickknacks than the advice of adults.

Those pessimistic citizens of the country who so frequently hark back to the "good old days" should have skipped yesterday's newspapers. A woman has been nominated for United States senator on the republican ticket in Illinois. And a woman will serve a term in the senate, beginning next year, because the nomination is equivalent to election. Ruth Hanna McCormick is well chosen by Illinois. She is politically minded by inheritance and experience, a competent businesswoman capable of making her own decisions. The experience will not be particularly new to her—but it will be very new to the United States senate.

Most people have individual opinions as to what constitutes good entertainment. When it comes to patronizing the talkies, for example, some will vote for the musical comedy variety, others the melodramatic thriller, still others the screen production of a famous stage drama. For this last group it is safe to say that George Arliss in "Disraeli"—shown here for the first time last night—will take immediate rank as the finest screen production, silent or talking, in their experience. A wonderful play and a world renowned actor who knows no peer in this age. Surely the talking picture justifies itself with the most severe critic in a show of this kind. Until it became practical, residents of smaller cities could not know the artistry of George Arliss without visiting metropolitan centers, and their conception of fine stagercraft was limited to road shows of the third-rate variety. Not so now. The best in dramatic art is within the reach of every theatre in America, as "Disraeli" proves.

THE FIRST HUNDRED YEARS

The 100th anniversary of the first covered wagon train heading into the west is being celebrated today. It was the beginning of that now world famous trail to the Oregon Country. And though much could be written of the daring and vision of this pioneer vanguard who began the building of a western empire, the impressive thing in the 1930 centennial to many people will be the tremendous progress that has been made in the comparatively short span of a hundred years. In just a little more time than can be covered by the memory of pioneers still living a dozen states have been cut from a western wilderness and have developed a type of civilization unsurpassed anywhere in the world. In spite of obstacles and distance, Oregon houses a million prosperous, happy people just a century after her lands became the goal for settlers. In that short time it has taken its place as the biggest producers of lumber, as one of the foremost states in horticulture, as one of the first in permanent highways. There are many things that could be cited as indicating the tremendous strides taken by Oregon people in the last hundred years, and all of them would emphasize the tribute due the past. If the last five score years has wrought such a change in the Pacific Northwest, who can logically place limits on what progress will be made in the years to come? After all, Oregon is the least highly developed, the least populated state on the Pacific slope. It is, in truth, the only remaining area in the nation with diversified possibilities that have not been largely exploited. There are plenty of doubters who will ask what there is to bring additional people to Oregon, but bring them it will, and in large numbers. Oregon will grow in spite of herself and the state of today will seem as distant at the 200th anniversary of the first wagon train as the trail-making itself. How much the new era will be hastened will depend on the success of such movements as the "On To Oregon" campaign now being organized. With effective publicity, united effort, renewed confidence—with a combination of these, Oregon's progress will be rapid. And only with these can that progress measure up to the courage, the sacrifice and the vision of the pioneers of a hundred years ago.
