USE OF ROCKET PLANES NEARING

This Is Prediction of Dr. Paul Heylandt, German Authority

By Louis P. Lochner (Associated Press Staff Writer) BERLIN, April 19 (AP)—Dr. Paul Heylandt, one of Germany's leading authorities on the application of liquid gases for industrial purposes predicts that the time is not far off when airplanes can be shot thousands of feet into the sky by means of a new type rocket motor and can reach the United States from Europe in from six to eight hours.

More than that, Dr. Heylandt says, so high will be the speed—between 2300 and 600 miles an hour—of this rocket-propelled plane that the motors can be turned off over Newfoundland and the pilot can glide the rest of the way to New York.

Has 500 Patents Dr. Heylandt holds some 500 patents in all parts of the world for processes and apparatus. In 1925 he already had applied for his inventions under license and the Heildelberg Polytechnic has conferred an honorary degree upon him in recognition of his scientific achievements.

The engineer received the endorsement of the Associated Press as the first newspaper man to see in action what has been carefully kept from the public, although its deafening noise caused the whole neighborhood to wonder—namely Max Valler's "rocket car."

My real interest in Valler's car is that it affords a means of testing our rocket motor out practically," said Dr. Heylandt. "Our tests already have convinced me we have solved the problem of combining liquid fuel with pure liquid oxygen to achieve a continuous recoil propulsive power. The next step will be to build a rocket motor to drive an airplane by an ordinary motor. We plan that this plane shall take off the ground with an ordinary motor and then as it reaches high altitudes the operator will switch on the rocket motor. After this has proven successful the next step will be to construct a plane with a rocket motor only. We plan at present to shoot across the English channel with it as the first large test."

In tests with the rocket car, Valler has used a liquid oxygen rocket motor developed by Dr. Heylandt. In the front section of Valler's car is a gasoline tank and behind the driver is a tank of the new liquid oxygen. Both are fed into a narrow bottle-shaped tube in the rear of the car where they are ignited and produce a recoil propelling the car forward. The exploded mixture escapes by a rear aperture leaving a long trail of fire behind but no smoke.

BABIES' EYES One of the most common forms of unnecessary and avoidable blindness is the result of an eye disease acquired by the baby at birth or during the first weeks of life.

This affliction nearly always could have been prevented by the use of certain eye drops. It usually is called "babies' sore eyes." Physicians call it Ophthalmia Neonatorum.

It begins with a redness of the eyes. The lids become swollen and pus is discharged from between them. If this condition is neglected in the beginning, it becomes much more difficult or even impossible to cure later on.

So-called home remedies should never be tried on a case of babies' sore eyes. The risk is too great. Proper medical treatment should be secured at once, or the eyes may be severely damaged so that, even if complete blindness does not result, sight may be greatly impaired.

Enough damage may be done by this disease in one day to make it impossible, even with the greatest care, to prevent total blindness.

About 20 years ago, Dr. Carl Franz Crede of the University of Leipzig found that if the doctor, nurse or midwife who takes care of the baby when it is born would put a few drops of a certain silver-containing solution in the baby's eyes immediately after birth, this would prevent the disease in practically all cases.

In many states such preventive treatment is now required by law. As a result of the widespread use of these "drops," a reduction during the last twenty years of approximately 68 per cent in the number of blind cases resulting from Ophthalmia Neonatorum is reported by an organization gathering such statistics.

Editor's Attack And Defend Radio

WASHINGTON, April 19 (AP)—Radio was defended as an ally of newspapers and attacked as their competitor by speakers today at the convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

M. H. Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting company, said there was no material evidence that radio was cutting down newspaper advertising.

Aylesworth was followed by Paul B. Williams, editor of the Utica, N. Y. Press, who asserted he believed that newspapers had made a mistake in "permitting themselves to be used to build a competitor."

150 BURNED TO DEATH IN CHURCH FIRE

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 19 (AP)—Doubt that the proposed merger of the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern railways can be accomplished was expressed today by Ralph Budd, president of the latter road, on his return to St. Paul from Washington where he discussed the plan with Minnesota congressmen.

While I think the merger exceedingly desirable from the standpoint of the Northwest," Mr. Budd said, "I think it also is doubtful whether it can be accomplished."

100-Year-Old Structure The structure was 100 years old and its worn-out boards were tinder to the blaze. Outside, the fire departments of Cotes and Pittsford fought vainly with antiquated apparatus to extinguish the fire. Those who had escaped and the crowding townsmen tried to open the jammed door but the massing of those inside against it made their effort unsuccessful.

Among the dead, who were buried in a cinder, were two priests, a notary and the burgomaster of Cotes, which is a small town of 5,000 population 45 miles northwest of Buchanan, near the edge of the Transylvanian Alps. Hardly a family in the town escaped unscathed.

MAY VOTE TO BE LIGHT IS PREDICTION

candidate, whose chief plank centered on the development of highways and the Oregon country in general, returned to Portland during the week end established himself in the center and the burgomaster of Cotes in various speeches that he felt as soon as the highway bond retirement peak was reached, special attention should be given to the improvement of market roads.

Charles Hall, Marshfield, and John A. Jeffrey, Portland, the other two republican candidates, continued their campaign in various sections of the state.

Democratic politics in the state are going ahead with Edward F.
