LINDBERGHS MAKE RECORD TRIP EASTER

utes and 32 seconds—a schedule of breakfast in California, luncheon enroute, dinner (a little late) in New York.

Colonel Lindbergh, who made the flight to test the possibility of commercial routes at high altitude believes that such flights will follow along the trail he blazed across the country.

"This is only one flight," he said, "and I hope to make another. However, I believe transport flying in the future will go to higher levels, first the airmail and later passenger planes."

He said they flew at from 10,000 to 15,000 feet altitude most of the way, except for the last stretch into New York.

The colonel gave to Mrs. Lindbergh much of the credit for the actual technical details of the flight. She did the navigating, he said, kept the charts, and occasionally handled the controls. Their plane is equipped with dual controls.

Both the colonel and his lady were smiling on arrival as they faced a battery of cameras and a crowd of between 1,500 and 2,000 persons which had waited since early afternoon for his arrival.

His face was dirty and appeared drawn but Mrs. Lindbergh looked as fresh as though she had just stepped out of their home for a stroll down Park avenue.

As the photographers signified they were through with him, the colonel clambered out of the forward cockpit and aided mechanics in wheeling the plane into a hangar where room had been made for it. Their car was driven up under one of the wings.

Avoid Stares of Curious

Mrs. Lindbergh remained in the plane, her head ducked down to avoid the stare of the curious crowd which attempted to push its way into the hangar, until all but a handful were cleared out. The colonel then assisted her out and into the seat of their car, where she waited while he gave a short interview.

As they drove out of the hangar after the interview, bound for a New York hotel where they had reservations, one of the state troopers guarding the plane said that Mrs. Lindbergh, apparently more tired than she appeared, burst into tears and the colonel leaned over to comfort her.

After leaving Wichita they were not sighted until 10:40 when they dropped low over Allentown, Pa., following the airmail beacons into New York City.

A half hour later the drone of a plane could be heard at Roosevelt field, then the pin points of lights on the wings were made out and a moment later the plane was circling the field.

Perfect Landing

Twice around they went, then slid into the field to a perfect three point landing. The lights of their plane showed no apparent bump as they slipped down to earth again. The colonel taxied up into the flood lights at the east end of the field, where the crowd broke through the lines and streamed out across the field after the plane, but the colonel merely put on a little burst of speed to gain the hangar ramp and the engine was stopped, the propeller quit before the first rush broke around the plane.

When the plane was walked into the hangar the vertical fin on the tail was dented by the tail of a ship against which it was rammed but the fabric was not broken. The colonel passed his hand over the damaged fin and shook his head but made no comment.

Although there is no way in which to record the number of miles traveled by a plane in a long flight, the air line distance from Los Angeles to Wichita and from Wichita to New York, figured on a great circle route by spherical trignometry, gives the distance at 2,479 miles, 1,194 to Wichita and 1,285 from Wichita to New York. On his time between these points it was figured he averaged 174.2 miles an hour from Glendale to Wichita and 171.3 miles an hour from Wichita to New York. The colonel said he had encountered head winds in spots on the last leg of the flight, which would account for the decrease in speed.

CENSUS FIGURES NOT AVAILABLE THIS AFTERNOON

General disappointment is evident throughout the country as census figures, with most towns and cities finding their actual population hundreds and sometimes thousands of—with the bigger cities—tens of thousands below unofficial estimates made in recent years. Many believe that higher standards of living, resulting in increased use of telephones, light and power, etc., and increased attendance in schools are the cause of the variance between estimates and actual populations, as the estimates were usually based partly on the increase in utility users, school populations, etc.

Will Show Healthy Increase

La Grande will show a healthy increase over 1920, in spite of the fact that the small city limits cut off a large number of residents, Mr. Williams said, although he was not prepared this morning to give the figures.

The Observer secured a considerable number of names of persons not counted and turned these over to Mr. Williams, but it was found that a share of these were of persons living just over the city limits, etc..

When Mr. Williams is prepared to give an estimate, it will not be final, he points out, as five more days are allowed after the completion of the census to check up on traveling men, people visiting in other cities, etc.
