ness depend upon a blind obedience born of perfect faith in his elders. There are times a little later when he must still obey blindly, having confidence that his parents' judgment is better than his own. A little child should be unquestioningly obedient in all matters that concern his safety and physical well being. He should be obedient to all reasonable commands because he trusts the parent who makes them. But obedience is not an end in itself. It is a means to various ends — to protecting the child's safety and well being while he is little; to teaching him habits which will be useful to him all his life; to giving him the benefit of the superior judgment of his elders until such time as his own judgment is sufficiently developed to enable him to make his own decisions. If we understand that what we want of our children is something more than obedience, that we wish to develop in them the ability increasingly to use their own judgment and to acquire self control, we will be spared the folly of making a child do anything, merely to teach him to obey.

COLLISION SINKS BRITISH VESSEL (Continued from Page One) aboard his vessel on March 27. Health Talks. BURNS AND SCALDS. Burns dry or moist are among the most common and painful accidents which befall us. They require careful and skilled treatment, since both the immediate and ultimate results may be much modified for good or evil by the manner in which the injured part is cared for. A burn, depending upon the extent of tissue involved, and somewhat, too, on the form of heat or substance causing it, presents a series of problems, the first of which is shock. When more than a third of the body is involved in the burn the result is usually fatal. The gravity of the condition seems to depend more on the extent of the skin surface involved than on the depth of the injury. Burns over the abdomen or chest may prove fatal even when the area burned is relatively small. Pain naturally is one of the important considerations in dealing with burns, and frequently the pain suffered by the victim may be extreme, though the skin shows only a mild redness. The resultant scar formation and

Not Chinese Word. The plain English name "chopsticks" for the pair of small paper-like sticks used by Chinese and Japanese in eating signifies the quick ones; chop is plain English for quick. Only Good Breeding. "I am obsequious at certain times," said H. H. the sage of Chinatown. "It is proper that as a well-bred man I should prove that I know when it is time to bow."—Washington Star.

Genuineness. A man is never so ridiculous by those qualities that are his own as by those that he affects to have.—Franklin. Withdraw Add For Bids on Airmail. WASHINGTON, Apr. 26 (AP)—Following passage by congress of the Wotres airmail bill, Assistant Postmaster General Glover Friday announced that advertisements for bids for transportation of airmail over five trunk routes would be withdrawn and new awards would be made to the present operators. The routes affected by the withdrawal included Salt Lake City to Pasco, Wash., via Boise, Ida. Under the Wotres bill the rate of mail pay to operators is changed from a percentage to a mileage and space basis and the postmaster general has authority to issue certificates to the operators of these five routes when their present contract expires May 5.

Slot-Machine Idea Old. Coin-in-the-slot machines were known 200 years B. C. and it is probable that Cleobius invented them. They were used to dispense purifying water to Egyptian worshippers as they entered the temple. Five draughts had to be dropped in the machine in order to receive the liquid. Slot machines did not come into general use until about 100 years ago. Establishment of Port. The naval observatory says high water occurs 50 minutes later each day on an average. High water follows the transit of the moon across the meridian of any place by a certain interval, which is known as the "establishment of the port." This interval is approximately the same throughout the year for any one place, but differs widely for different places.

Ocean Stepping-Stones. The Dionede islands compose a group of three small islands situated near the middle of the Bering Strait in about 66 degrees north latitude and 163 degrees west longitude. They form stepping stones between the nearest points of Asia and North America. They were discovered by Bering in 1728. Term of Dorion. The term "skin plasters" as applied to paper money is United States slang. Originally it meant any paper money. It is said to have been applied first to the depreciated Continental currency after the War of the Revolution.

And With Television. The telephone company says it will soon be possible for a person to telephone around the world to himself. Imagine some of these smart fellows calling themselves up and saying, "Guess who this is?" North Carolina has over 20,000,000 acres of forest lands.

Twenty-two thousand nine hundred seven persons during the past year were fined or punished in Helsingfors, capital city of Finland, for trespassing upon the prohibition law, according to a news dispatch. Which means that as an average, every tenth inhabitant was convicted of illegal consumption of alcohol. The United States, it seems, is not the only country having difficulty with prohibition laws.

As if bootleg liquor were not enough, this country is now being treated to bootleg literature (?) following publicity given certain "improper writings" by the United States senate. D. H. Lawrence's "Lady Chatterly's Lover" has appeared in this country from England without suffering from a diluting process as in the case of liquor—and a Spokane circulating library rented it with great rapidity at 50c a day until authorities stepped in and confiscated the book. Somehow or other we can't be worried about the bad effect of these so-called bad books. If they are terribly bad, nice people will not be able to understand them; and those who can understand them must be fairly well versed in vulgarity already. Innocence and purity may well be protected but the issuance of a strict order, "Don't read that!", is a poor way to accomplish protection.

UTILIZING JUNKED CARS. Every section of the country cursed with unsightly "automobile graveyards"—and what section isn't?—finds cause for rejoicing in the report that the Ford Motor company has a plan for buying up discarded automobiles to melt down their metal parts for reclamation in its steel plants. Such conversion of material offers a partial solution of the problem created by the ever-growing piles of broken motor cars and trucks. In time, with efficient methods, the reclaimers may be able to pay enough for outmoded automobiles to clear the roads of machines so antiquated as to be menaces to traffic, and to clear the roadways of scars caused by the location of "graveyards" within sight of main highways. Today such machines have a junk value only for their nonferrous metals—aluminum, copper and brass.

When rubber prices soared a few years ago a similar program of reclamation was instituted for the rubber in old tires, which, when mixed with fresh gum rubber, was molded into new tires of fair quality. Reclaimed rubber still is in demand, particularly for the manufacture of hard rubber products, and the heaps of worn automobile tires that once littered the landscape have disappeared. A similar fate for old automobiles would be a scenic as well as an economic blessing.

Automobile manufacturers and dealers look forward to that time when an automobile after two-years' operation will be worth more as junk than as a vehicle of transportation. When and if it is realized, perpetual motion will be established in the motor industry.

CONTROLLING THE SUPPLY. A cooperative marketing association is to agriculture what a corporation is to business. It is the opinion of some business men that cooperative associations are founded on the fallacious assumption that they can set aside the laws of supply and demand. They entertain no such silly ideas.

There is no farmer who has given serious thought to the development of a better marketing system who does not realize that the price of a product necessarily depends largely upon the demand for it and the supply with which to meet that demand is taken into consideration the price is affected largely by the time, the manner and the place of the feeding of the supply to the demand. In other words, the supply must be fed to the demand in an orderly way and in such quantities as the demand can consume at a fair price.

Provided the supply is kept under rigorous control, as it is in industry, there is nothing to lose and everything to gain by impounding surplus production to be fed out according to the demand. So the big problem before the federal farm board is keeping the supply under control. Raising the general level of farm prices will provide an almost irresistible temptation to increase acreage where arable soil and labor are available.

Men! This is a "Wife-Saving Station"

If you love your wife as much as you tell her you do, protect her life by insisting that she send that weekly wash to this "Wife Saving Station."

You'll be money in pocket by saving doctors' and druggists' bills, laundresses' time, and wages and feed; fuel, electricity and washing supplies. The clothes will also last longer than under home-washing treatment. And, glory-be! you'll go home to a happy wife, Mondays and Tuesdays, instead of the poor exhausted woman who greets you now.

Friend Wife may not believe this, but it is true—has been demonstrated in thousands of homes.

Clothes washing has become a man's job; thanks to scientific machinery, and washing supplies. Men and machines make a better job of it with less wear on the fabrics; less loss of colors, less shrinkage.

Don't let your misguided life-partner sacrifice herself a day longer, through false notions of "duty" or "economy." Take this matter into your own hands and insist that she at least give it a trial one week — the whole bundle not merely a part of it — for complete washing and ironing, ready to wear or to use.

If you doubt your ability to "sell" her the idea yourself, bring her here, and let us take you both through the laundry and explain the how and why of every step in every process.

Chats With Parents. OBEDIENCE PLUS. By Alice Judson Peale. To hear some mothers talk, one would think that obedience was the goal of all child training. Parents who consider obedience as an end in itself either have never thought the matter through, or they are concerned more with their own comfort and convenience than with their child's ultimate development. A thoroughly obedient child makes least trouble for his parents, but he is not necessarily learning attitudes which will be of service to him in later years. Of course every child must learn to obey. There are many occasions, especially during the early years, when his safety and happiness
