RADIO GARAGE DOOR DUE TO WINTRY GALE

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP)—A gale blowing about their heads as they fumbled with a lock on the garage door gave three Spokane men an idea.

It was a radio controlled garage door.

The device was designed by J. J. Morrison, his son, A. R. and Morris Angell who have equipped their garage and automobiles with it.

A reversible motor operating the garage, a spark coil and a mercury switch are the principal parts.

Antarctic Thrills At State In "Lost Zeppelin"

Just one big thrill after another, with love and adventure crowded in, is the way Tiffany's all-talking special, "The Lost Zeppelin" is described. This great production, with Conway Tearle, Virginia Valli and Ricardo Cortez heading a distinguished cast, will be seen at the State theater on Friday & Saturday.

Tearle takes the part of the Zeppelin Commander who, on the eve of starting for the antarctic regions, learns that his wife is in love with his chief aide on the expedition. When the Zeppelin gets near the South Pole it is wrecked. All of those on board except the Commander and his aide perish.

An aeroplane, having picked up distress signals from the expedition before the huge dirigible was wrecked, reaches the scene and there is room in it for only one passenger. The commander insists that his aide go back to safety, believing this will bring happiness to his wife. The ending of the picture is filled with surprises.

BOTULISM AND PRESERVES

There is no danger of botulism poisoning in fresh foods but there is such a danger in foods which have been processed for preservation; that is, canned, pickled or preserved, especially if the processing has been done at home.

The botulism germ grows and produces its poisons only in foods containing protein. It may therefore be found in pickled or preserved meats and in certain of the nitrogen-containing vegetables such as peas and beans.

To safeguard against all danger of botulism, the food to be preserved must be handled with extreme cleanliness and must be heated sufficiently to insure the killing of bacteria. To be adequate for this purpose, the heat must be not less than 120 degrees centigrade in intensity and must be applied for not less than ten minutes in duration. The food should be canned or sealed as soon after the cooking as possible. Foods which have been rendered sterile by heating may become infected when exposed at a lower temperature.

It is advisable to re-cook home caned goods before serving. Food preserved in brine of more than eight per cent concentration is usually safe. If sugar is used in preserving foods, the syrup should be at least a fifty per cent concentration.

Canned or preserved foods that are uncommonly soft, mushy or gassy, or give off an abnormal odor, should be suspected.
