BISHOP CANNON WITNESS TODAY

Southern Methodist board of which he is head took part in the election of members of congress, he replied:

"We have done nothing aside from sending out literature. We have taken no part in elections."

"You took part in the 1928 election," asked Senator Walsh, demagogic Montana.

"I have taken a part in every election since I have become of age as a citizen. We simply sent out statements of the church and of the board. As to getting into particular fights I did not, except perhaps in my own state."

"But you were active in the 1925 election, were you not, Bishop?"

"A little more active than usual."

The bishop said the annual budget of the board ran around $15,000 or $16,000 a year, but that he himself received no salary from the board.

"It was not my habit to lobby personally very much," he added, explaining he used the word "lobby" as meaning legitimate activity to present views on legislation in members of congress.

Questioned by Walsh, the witness read a telegram he and others sent Secretary Mellon in 1929, saying that if prohibition enforcement appropriations were not increased, the question would arise whether the treasury "sincerely desires effective enforcement."

Walsh asked if that meant Cannon was dissatisfied with prohibition enforcement.

"The telegram speaks for itself," replied the bishop.

Cannon said he urged Mellon to support the Harris amendment to increase prohibition appropriations by $25,000,000.

An exchange of correspondence between Cannon and President Hoover, before his inauguration, was read:

The letter to Hoover, dated Jan. 24, 1929, said:

"In order that you may have full information, I am enclosing some statements in reference to the appropriation of $24,000,000."

Hoover replied:

"Many thanks indeed for your letter of January 24. I am very glad to have the information you send."

The demonstration opens at two o'clock and the women of the town and valley are given a cordial invitation as guests of the observatory.

Many women find a more convenient and more desirable to entertain their club at luncheon and have bridge afterwards, and the problem is to serve something easily on account of the press of other household duties," said Mrs. McLean in referring to the luncheon prepared and served at the last demonstration this afternoon.

The menu was one she used in entertaining her own club ten days ago and while it was very attractive, sufficient time was found to make all preparations and arrangements in addition to the demands of her household including those two charming young children in whom La Grande cooking school enthusiasts are so interested.

Her preparation is such that the menu is almost her creation of several years experience. The menu used for today was as follows, the recipes as used by Mrs. McLean, being given also in detail.

accept the mandate of my fellow republicans."

Tariff Opponent
Returns from 1,651 of 2,433 practitioners gave Hamilton 77,045 votes. He had campaigned against the tariff measure, contending its agricultural rates were not in proportion to the new industrial schedules.

Frank J. Lund, Senator Smith W. Brookhart's former campaign manager, had a total of 26,665, and W. O. Payne, veteran editor, trailed with 8,406.

Republicans Maintain Lead
Ten republican congressmen also maintained good majorities. State Senator Fred Gilchrist was leading in a three-cornered race for the post now held by Dickinson, who was the only representative not seeking another term.

Representative W. E. Kopp, T. J. B. Robinson, and Gilbert N. Jansen were leading their opponents, while the latter seven congressmen had no contests within their party.

The democratic ticket for state offices, led by Fred P. Hagaman of Waverly, was nominated without opposition.

PREHISTORIC BONES FOUND BY WORKMEN

A TYPE OF REPTILES
Editor's Note—According to information available here today dinosaurs, of which there were many varieties herbivorous and carnivorous, were a subclass of order of reptiles, which appeared in the Trias and became extinct with the close of the Mesozoic. They were nearly world wide in distribution, but their remains are particularly numerous in the western part of the United States. Some forms walked chiefly on their hind legs while others used all fours. The largest of the dinosaurs were herbivorous. They varied in size from two or three feet to 50 or 70 feet in length. The earlier types were closely related to the early Crocodilla and Rhynchocephala.

In recent months considerable publicity has been given to several discoveries of prehistoric bones found in Central and Western Oregon, but this is the first Eastern Oregon find of consequence.
