between the teachings of the church and those of the schools and colleges, is perhaps one of the greatest handicaps which faces American civilization in its efforts to reach higher standards of conduct, to develop a finer culture, to grow into a mature well-rounded character," he declared.

Following up this lead, Bishop Remington said: "Truth as absolute does not exist, so far as the human mind can discover it, it is only relative. So we tell the truth as men speak of light through the clouds and mists of human understanding. For this reason no teacher has the right to be dogmatic about the facts of the universe. You may, for example, accept or reject the evidences of the evolutionary theory, but don't tell children that the truth about God, the universe, or their best selves hangs or falls on their belief or their unbelief of this theory. Neither the best scientists nor the best teachers of religion would be dogmatic about evolution. It may be generally accepted as a basis for further investigation or discovery. The point I am making is that truth about reality, that which lies back of all things is only relative and not absolute. Human understanding is still looking in a glass darkly and does not yet see face to face.

"As teachers, therefore, you must see the necessity of giving your children some other guidance than mere theories. The basis of education, like that of religion, is faith, not knowledge, and that faith is inculcated through personal examples. Give your children the nearest approach to truth you yourself can discover, taken from acceptable authorities, and accredited by the character of those authorities, and then let their experience and the future discoveries of mankind determine their worth. I speak this earnestly because there is so much slipshod dogmatism today, both in schools and colleges, about debatable theories, both in science and philosophy, and even about morals and the commonplace facts of life."

Speaking directly to the graduates, he said: "If you haven't a satisfactory philosophy of life, in God's name, don't fasten your own misery upon others. . . If you yourselves have not found Him, I pray that you may. If you haven't, I urge you with all my power, do not in act or word dim that bright vision of the Christ." Commencement Tuesday— Commencement exercises for the Normal school will be held Tuesday, when the graduates will receive their diplomas. President Norman F. Coleman, of Reed college, will deliver the address. The exercises will begin at 2:30 p. m. in the E. O. N. auditorium.

DINING-CAR CHEF DELIGHTS PATRONS WITH BERRY OMELET. Features This Colorful Dish on Both Breakfast and Luncheon Menus. A chef on one of the well-known western trains added a new note to his menus by offering a raspberry omelet. The fresh berries, sprinkled with powdered sugar, were placed on the surface of the omelet just before it was folded. Additional raspberries were also used as a garnish. The dish was most inviting and virtually a balanced meal in itself.

SENATOR BEATEN IN CAROLINA RACE. (Continued from Page One) Interpretation of the "varsity drag." The remainder of the program is in keeping with the featured acts. Doors for the night performance will open at 7 o'clock and the main show starts one hour later. SENATOR BEATEN IN CAROLINA RACE. (Continued from Page One) Simmons for re-nomination in the North Carolina democratic primary was the subject of much discussion in Washington today with many citing his opposition to the presidential candidacy of Alfred E. Smith as the principal cause of his downfall. These pointed out that Simmons' victorious opponent, Josiah W. Bailey, entered the contest with the avowed purpose of "quashing" the senator for deserting the party in 1928 and that this formed a major issue in the campaign. Simmons' defeat came after thirty years of party leadership in his state during which time he was a power also in the national councils of his party. In his retirement, the senate will lose its oldest member in point of service. With Simmons out of the race, nine of the present senate membership will not return for the seventy-second congress. Deeney, of Illinois and Grundy of Pennsylvania, were defeated in primary elections and six are not candidates for re-election. This group consists of Giffert of Massachusetts, Gould of Maine, Phelps of Colorado, Goff of West Virginia, Sullivan of Wyoming and Baird of New Jersey. Senator McMaster, republican South Dakota, is the only member who has emerged successfully from a primary contest. Senator McNary, republican, Oregon, was renominated without opposition.

A GREAT CAR THE PUBLIC has wanted a car that would have speed, ride easily, steer easily, be roomy enough for the whole family, possess real beauty of line and finish, yet cost no more than mere transportation. The new DURANT Four, announced a week ago, is just such a car. It will go 70 miles an hour, climb steep hills in high gear, ride easily over rough roads and flatter any owner's pride with its appearance. Yet it sells at such a sensationally low price that the big sedan, seating six persons comfortably, fully equipped and delivered here, is within $20 of the lowest priced sedan in the world.
