WEATHER WARM IN WALLOWA CO.

Farmers Fear Heat Wave Will Damage Wheat, Which is Very Tender.

By G. C. Meek (Observer Correspondent)
WALLOWA, Ore. (Special)—Extremely warm weather has prevailed over this community during the past few days. This being the first really warm weather of the summer season, following a rather long period of cool rainy weather, it is greatly noticed by everyone. Some of the wheat farmers express fears of some damage to the wheat crops with the hot weather coming so suddenly following the cool, rainy weather which has caused the grain to become very tender, and at this stage is thought by some to burn or scald easily. The growth of all grain crops has been quite good during the past week. Much of the early sown fall wheat is starting to head out at this time and if weather conditions remain warm it is probable that harvest in the hill sections will start fully as early as those of normal seasons. Some plowing of summer fallow is still being done in parts of the community. However, farmers say that a heavy crop of vegetation growing on the unplowed fields, soon saps the moisture from the soil making it really too dry to plow well. Weeds have been making a vigorous growth on much of the early plowed fields and many of the farmers have been busy much of the time cultivating to keep them down. Range conditions are reported to be excellent in all parts of the county. Much of the surplus livestock has been moved to the timbered areas in the mountains and north woods sections where they will be ranged for the next few months. Stockmen who have made trips to the ranges during the past two weeks say that they have never seen the feed better there in June. Stock raisers have done exceptionally well since the hills have disappeared and are becoming fat earlier than usual. Potatoes and other kinds of late garden vegetables which were planted by many only a couple of weeks ago are coming up nearly. Many have begun to feel that there is but little danger of damaging frosts coming now, with the time for the usual June frosts now past and but very little damage to fruit and gardens having resulted. According to some of the farmers who have small family orchards on their farms, the prospects for fruit appear to be quite good, cherries and other varieties of hardy fruit which are grown here appear to be fairly well loaded at many of the orchards. Slightly higher prices for wool have been offered here during the past week and a good many of the small lots have been sold at prices ranging from 11c for fine wool to 20c per pound for the better grades of course. E. E. Johnson, of Lower Valley, has been busy during the past few days meeting growers and buying many of the small lots. No buying is being done by the Warehouse Service corporation here, according to Lee W. Bell manager. Some shearing of farm flocks has been done during the past week, however, it is thought that the greater part of the shearing has been finished. According to many of the flock owners, the clip obtained will not average as good this year as last and close attention to poisoning will be necessary for the next few weeks to prevent much grain from being ruined. E. D. Roedel, who lives at the former J. H. Paes ranch in the valley a few miles east of here, recently finished shearing his band of some 200 ewes and reports a fairly good clip. He recently purchased a shearing outfit and did his own shearing. Much spreading of poisoned grain is being done by many of the farmers of this community to prevent damage to their crops by the large number of ground squirrels which have been moving into the grain fields from the large pastures and range areas. Excellent results in setting large numbers of the young squirrels is being had where poisoning has been thorough during the past two weeks. The old squirrels do not appear to be taking it the poison so very good extent. Since the weather has turned hot a considerable amount of cutting has been done around the edges of some of the large wheat fields in the hills

Elmer Osborn, who is farming a large tract of land for J. H. Haun in the Parsnip creek and Leap sections, has had three gang plows working on the last field he has to plow during the next week. He reports that they have plowed around 500 acres this spring and the greater part of the summer allow has been worked once.

J. E. Haun, who has been herding his band of sheep on range in the Leap community during the past few weeks, moved the sheep to his home ranch at Evans the latter part of the week, where they are being held for shearing. Charles Bloodworth and wife, of Trout creek, were visitors in town the latter part of the week. Mr. Bloodworth reports crops looking good in that community and says that summer fallowing is well advanced at the most of the farms. He has plowed 200 acres this season and seeded 175 acres to spring wheat which is up and looking fine.
A number of farmers of this community were delivering hogs to Evans during the past week for shipment to Portland with the Wallowa County Marketing association.
L. A. McCrae returned home recently from Lewiston, where he went to visit his father, Tom McCrae, who is quite poorly. Mr. McCrae reports his father resting quite easily when he returned home.
Ray Knight has been busy the past few days hauling out wool for some of the farmers of the Pow-wah ridge section.
Will Collins, of Pow-wah, was a business visitor in town the last of the week. He reports crops and range conditions very good in that district.
Earl Rogers, a former resident of this community now residing at La Grande, was in town renewing old acquaintances the latter part of the week.
Lee W. Bell left Sunday for Portland where he expects to enter the hospital for a time. He has been in poor health for some time and feels the need of a rest.
Mrs. Opal Osborn and children, of Parsnip creek, were visitors in town the last of the week.
Willy & Gettings, who have been logging in the Whiskey creek district, have finished their operations at that point.
Sam and G. C. Meek visited Sunday at the J. R. Williams home.
