Favors Extension Of Branch Banking

WASHINGTON (AP)—Extension of branch banking systems outside metropolitan districts was recommended by Charles E. Mitchell, of the National City bank of New York, before the house banking committee.

Warning against "precipitate legislation" the New Yorker said there was nothing to be "feared" in the movement of branch banking or group banking as a substitute where branch banking is not permitted.

"Banking is not a business which can be monopolized," he added.

Mitchell said the suggestion for branch banking within trade areas proposed by John W. Pole, comptroller of the currency, is "at present too broad in its scope."

He said that at present he thought it should be extended to a somewhat larger field in the vicinity of our cities allowing the experience of this extension to be the guide in future legislation.
