She based the action upon Sir Joseph's opinion that the painting was put on the canvass about 200 years after the death of the Italian master, adding that this conclusion had stopped negotiations with the Kansas City Art Museum which was ready to pay her $250,000 for the painting.

Helen Wins And Gives America Lead In Series With Seattle

By The Associated Press WIMBLEDON, England, June 14 (AP)—Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, world's champion for three years, was extended to the limit in the opening set of a match with Mrs. Phoebe Watson, of England, today but came through to win at 7-5, 6-1, to give the United States a lead of three matches to two in the series for the Wightman cup.

Mrs. Moody, with her usually powerful service somewhat below par, dropped the first five games of the match to Mrs. Watson, the player who yesterday defeated Helen Jacobs.

Against the withering cross fire of the rummy English player, firmly entrenched on her baseline most of the time, it seemed impossible for Mrs. Moody to pull out the set but this she did, at last striking her stride and sweeping seven straight games to do it.

It took Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, Cal., only about half an hour to conquer Joan Fry, of England, at 6-9, 6-2 in the fourth match of the series and bring the United States forces to even terms with the English at two matches each.

The defeat of the 17-year-old Boston youngster, Sarah Payne, by England's sensational new star, Phyllis Mumford, 6-9, 6-2, in the sixth match brought the rival teams to even terms with one more contest to be played.

England's traditional strength in doubles made the home team the favorite to retain the cup as the teams took the court for this all-important battle.

New Champion Is Expected In Northwest Golf

By Frank G. Gorrie (Associated Press Sports Writer) VANCOUVER, B. C., June 14 (AP)—A "Jon Moo" finish was virtually the only hope of Nell Christian, Portland professional, retaining his Pacific Northwest open golf championship today.

At the end of the first 36 holes yesterday in the 72 hole tournament, Christian trailed five other Pacific Northwest aces with a total of 151.

Duncan Sutherland, diminutive Vancouver pro, led the field with an even par figure of 146. Bert Wild of Bellingham, and Joe Moxell, of Medford, Ore., were close on Sutherland's heels with 147 each, and Phil Taylor, of Victoria, and Dave Black, of Vancouver, were riding in third place with 150 each.

Johnny Jones, of Seattle, was even with Christian with 151 and unless the Waverly club pro pulls some birdies out of his hat today, he will likely give way to a new champion.

Don Moe, whom the Vancouver golf officials had hoped would compete in the Pacific Northwest amateur tournament here next week, conquered Phil Stout in a Walker Cup match in England after he had been seven down and only 15 holes to go. Moe has not returned to England.

Christian hoped to duplicate at least part of Moe's feat in a medal race.

K. G. Storey, Spokane country club star, was the low scorer among the 23 amateurs yesterday with a total of 155. He tied Fred Hemmrod, of Seattle, and Clyde Shumaker, of Aberdeen, to rank eighth.

Other leaders included: Walter Pursey, Seattle, and Norman Smith, Portland, 152; Ivan Johnson, Portland 152; Wilbur Price, Olympia, 154; Gordon Richards Tacoma, 157; and Ray Hall Tacoma, 159.

The two-day tournament was to close today with the annual Pacific Northwest amateur meet for men and women scheduled to start next Monday and continue thru Saturday.

PICTURE FRAUDS CAUSE AGITATION

Mass Production of "Old Masters" in France Upsets Art Circles.

By John Evans (Associated Press Staff Writer) PARIS (AP)—Mass production of "old masters" and other forms of fraud have upset art circles in France.

The resulting agitation has led Pierre Bismell, former minister of fine arts, to urge creation of an official bureau whose staff findings would supplant present reliance upon "expert opinion."

He believes that with the proper kind of laboratory tests, such a bureau could guarantee the genuineness of disputed works of art and eventually curb the fakery which, some critics say, is of factory proportions.

The Louvre maintains a laboratory in charge of J. Fernand Colerier, a scientist of note, where chemistry and X-rays are used to determine the genuineness of pictures acquired for the government. But this service is not available for private buyers.

The case of Jean Charles Millet and Charles Gazot has focused attention on the subject. They are charged with operating a factory which turned out paintings bearing the signature of the former's grandfather, the world famous painter of "The Gleaners," "The Angels" and other noted pictures.

Whatever action the courts may take on this couple, there is frank admission by art authorities that galleries and markets harbor thousands of bogus masterpieces.

Even the Louvre has been victimized. Two "Watteaus" bought three years ago for $40,000 have been declared to be by a far less important painter, Quillard. "The Angels" and other noted pictures.

Whatever action the courts may take on this couple, there is frank admission by art authorities that galleries and markets harbor thousands of bogus masterpieces.

Modern painters, however, are less charitable toward imitators. Many of them have demanded removal from art stores of certain pictures credited to them and one last year went about slapping canvases which he declared to be forgeries.

Such a disagreement in 1929 caused a ten-year debate that has not yet been ended although a suit in New York for $50,000 against Sir Joseph Duveen, noted British

Many Sign But Fail To Ratify General Pacts
