THE ONE FOUNDATION—For other foundation can you find any than this is laid, which is Jesus Christ—1 Cor. 3:11.

They are making alarm clocks costly, colorful and charming to overcome that dawning urge to smash them.

La Grande's census figures of 9,600 can be called the "metropolitan area." That's what big cities do when the actual census figures don't come up to expectations.

With the stock market hitting new low levels for the year, the investor with a lot of certificates in his safe can appreciate how the farmer feels with a lot of wheat in the warehouse.

Clara Bow's difficulties with a "boy friend's" wife reminds you of that most ridiculous of late ridiculous movie songs, "I've Got It But It Don't Do Me No Good." The grammar and the wail both seem appropriate for Clara's type of stuff.

Getting ready to move a newspaper plant and office is like shifting the residence of a large family that has occupied the old homestead for two or three generations. In each case the attic is congested with a variety of junk that should be thrown away yet might be useful some dim day in the future.

The state republican committee will not have an easy time waiting until the middle or last of July to name a nominee for governor to take Joseph's place on the fall ballot. There are many aspirants, each section having some prominent citizen in view as a likely governor. Here in Eastern Oregon Fred Kiddle is actively mentioned and it is probable he will be a strong contender before the committee. Kiddle has had the experience of two sessions in the legislature, has been state commander of the Legion, is prominent in the national affairs of that body, was manager in Oregon for Hoover in the last presidential campaign, and represents the type of candidate that would appeal to the old Patterson following. Thoroughly acquainted with Eastern Oregon conditions, Mr. Kiddle would be very acceptable in most counties on this side of the Cascades. And he would not be lacking in support in several sections of western Oregon. If he could win the nomination, the recent primary fight would be smoothed over and a republican victory assured.

Several months ago the total of life insurance in force passed the $100,000,000 mark and at the present rate of increase only a few years will be required to double that figure. No one knows how fast it will expand in the future, but a much larger amount of insurance could be carried without disturbing the economic balance of the country.

What sort of giant is this that has reared its head among us? The day may come when the life insurance companies will exert a more powerful influence financially than the banks themselves. Since the time of Grover Cleveland they have been important enough to command the personal interest of presidents, and today a former secretary of the treasury heads one of the larger companies and former President Coolidge is a director of another.

They exert a powerful stabilizing influence upon the finances of the nation. As stabilizing agencies they serve in the direction of investment. At one time, when large sections of the country were still being opened up for settlement, one-third of all their assets were invested in railroad securities. The government went to the insurance companies for financial aid in the World war, and today they further development by buying utility and municipal bonds. The public was reassured in a time of great stress when the stock and business crash of last fall failed to transmit over to them to the life insurance companies.

STOCK PRICES SNAP BACK IN WALL STREET

NEW YORK, June 19 (AP)—Stock prices snapped back today with the remarkable elasticity normally supplied by heavy short covering when acute selling pressure is lifted. A long list of important shares on the New York stock exchange including the major portion of yesterday's losers.

The greater part of the day's advance was accomplished at the opening, as bears cleared huge buying orders to cover their short sales made at higher levels, but after some irregularity during the latter morning the market moved almost steadily higher, and closed around the day's best levels. Trading tapered comparatively dull off for the early transactions, however, and total sales aggregated only 5,700,000 shares, against more than 4,400,000 yesterday. The close was strong.
