A Glorious Proposal—Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatever ye do, do all to the glory of God.—1 Cor. 10:31.

The man who gives in when he knows he is right is weak, or married.

President Hoover's success as an engineer may be due to the fact that he doesn't waste the steam on the whistle.

If the United States ever becomes overcrowded increasing the number of week-ends and holidays will remedy the situation.

When they took the swimming suits off the backs of fair bathers they took the food out of the mouths of the cloth weavers.

We won't object to the more lively baseballs and golf balls if they don't give the militarists the idea of a more lively cannon ball to speed up the war game.

HE WAS ON THE SPOT

Publicity has been given recently to an announcement by a so-called historical that July 2 and not July 4 should properly be celebrated as Independence Day. The gentleman perhaps has never read any of George Washington's diaries, in which we may read the following entries:

Sunday, July 4, 1790: "Went to Trinity Church in the forenoon. This being the anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, the celebration was put off until tomorrow."

July 4, 1798: "Went up to the Celebration of the Anniversary of Independence and dined in the Spring Gardens near Alexandria with a large company of the Civil and Military of Fairfax County."

And there are similar entries for other years. Surely George Washington and his compatriots knew what they were doing. They were on the spot.

SELF-REFORM

Most reformers advocate such large measures that they cannot possibly be put into effect; so nothing comes of their efforts except a quarrel.

A modern philosopher makes a recommendation that is simple and workable. It is, briefly, that individuals better their own conduct. He explains:

"I do not suggest that a hundred thousand get together for a sunrise prayer-meeting, or that a million march on Washington, but that every individual accomplish reform by behaving a little better during the day, and continue the good work during the evening."

There were to be taxes, collections, drives or campaigns connected with such a reform movement. This new "reformer" is unique in that the reformers the nation has known in the past have always demanded something in payment, either in the form of a contribution or a vote or surrender of some personal liberty.

Reform should begin at home, is the creed of this modern apostle of better living and better reform. It suggests that perhaps some of the reformers of old have been more professional than spiritual.

Reform comes from practice.

MOUNTING ACCIDENTS

The total of 26,501,443 motor vehicles registered last year in the United States prepares one for a greater casualty list this year, for the 1930 registration probably will set a new record and the increasing accident rate of recent years removes the hope of a falling rate this year.

Reports for the year to date confirm the fears of many that traffic casualties this year will exceed all former years in proportion to number of vehicles in operation as well as in number of fatalities. The carnage is startling.

Motor vehicles are killing men, women and children by the thousands and mangle them by the hundreds of thousands, and yet the only difference between highways reasonably free from accidents and highways strewn with wreckage and dead and injured is a degree of care that is within the easy reach of every driver.

It is possible to drive safely under the most adverse conditions, yet many do not drive safely when conditions are most favorable. Most fatal accidents occur late at night when streets and highways are relatively deserted, because many drivers throw all care aside when they presume the way to be clear. The trouble is that in our hurry we seem to have forgotten the instinct of self-preservation.

Not even uniform highway regulations, strict enforcement of highway laws and wider highways can materially cut down the accident rate against such odds.

ANGELS FACE CELLAR DUCKS DURING WEEK

(By The Associated Press)
The sudden rise of Los Angeles from second to a clear three-game lead in first place and sale of Ike Boone, leading hitter of the Pacific coast league, occupied attention of Coast league fans today as the contenders faced the last two weeks of the first period of the season.

Sacramento, undisputed leader for more than six weeks, having encountered a disastrous seven-game losing streak at Hollywood last week, prepared for its first meeting since the opening week of the season with the Missions, a team which has been as variable from decided strength to decided weakness as Hollywood.

The Reds were to meet the erstwhile pace-setters minus their premier batsman, outfielder, Boone, whose sale to Brooklyn was announced yesterday. This southerner will go up to the majors for his fourth trial. The new leader, Los Angeles, faced Portland for a week, remembering that the Ducks just finished taking four out of seven from San Francisco in one of their best showings so far.

Hollywood, after their surprising run of victories over the Senators, prepared to entertain the Oaks, and Seattle to play host to the Seals.

Joe went over to see his new neighbor who had just moved in. They were watching a chicken. Joe—What the heck all that chicken, Bill, is he sick? Bill—No, I've moved so often every time he sees me he lays on his back to have his legs tied.

Now that the colleges are closed for the year thousands of American boys are hoping their records were nothing for the dean to write home about.

Chats With Parents

A DATE WITH MOTHER

By Alice Jackson Peale
Gilbert's mother had brought him down to the beach to spend the day. They were playing ball when a friend of hers greeted them.

Without excuse she dropped the ball and sat down to one of those intimate conversations which make it plain to any child that his presence is a nuisance.

Gilbert tried to be a good sport. He bounced the ball for a while, played along the edge of the water and dug in the sand—but mother still sat talking. At last he could endure it no longer. He walked up to his mother and said:

"Look here mother, you had a date with me. You said that we were going to spend the day here at the beach together. You said we would play games and have a regular time—and now you are not doing anything but just sitting there and talking."

There was justification in Gilbert's complaint. His mother's time generally was divided between social engagements and the tennis court. Although he was permitted at the family dinner table there usually was group-up company present and his existence was largely ignored.

He had counted on having his mother play with him this one day, and it was only natural for him to feel both hurt and disappointed that even now she took the first opportunity to escape from his society and devote herself to one of those ever-present group-ups.

Children should have their feelings. They want sometimes to claim their right to an exclusive enjoyment of their parent's society.

They do not need nor do they even want very much of it, but when they have counted upon it for some particular occasion it seems unfair to disappoint them.

Hard—For two cents I'd kill ya. Soft—Here's a nickel—bury me, too.
