Judge Refuses To Grant Injunction

ETROIT, July 2 (AP)—Circuit Judge Arthur Webster Tuesday refused Mayor Charles Bowler and his supporters an injunction restraining a city clerk from acting on a petition demanding the mayor's recall. In his decision Judge Webster said that he had no right to interfere with the election because "it gives questions wholly of a political nature."

Says Men More Sensitive
Modern women again score in a made recently by Professor Belli of Florence, Italy, which says, prove that the fair sex is not about one-tenth less sensitive, on the average, than do men. Human cheeks and foreheads are the most sensitive parts of the body, regardless of sex, the professor declares.

"Kulaks"
In Soviet Russia a kulak family is one whose "means of production" is valued at $700 or more. In 1928 any farmer who raised 50 worth of foodstuffs or more, or deducting $10 a head for family consumption, was considered a kulak. Such farmers are not until their wealth is reduced to the common level.

Proverbs
Not all proverbs hold wisdom. Some, such as "All's fair in love and war," hold clotted nonsense. Nonsense—knowing what is right and doing it—is a better guide to conduct than proverbs.

Sport Slants

by ALAN J. GOULD

Yankee love for victory on the field of sport, whether it is chess, checkers of yacht-racing, usually is very keen. Americans take their athletics, as a nation, much more seriously than most countries. This spirit of patriotic concentration pays off in winning results but I have found a tribute to fair-mindedness this summer in the widespread hope that the latest of Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrocks—the fifth—brings him good luck in the yacht races for the America's Cup in September off Newport.

The feeling seems to be that a "game guy" should have his reward. Sir Thomas, since 1899, has been spending millions in his effort to lift a battered silver mug that is worth not more than $500. He has faced the handicaps of the challenger, been compelled to build yachts seaworthy enough to cross the ocean under their own power, yet raceworthy enough to meet the defenders in their own waters. He has taken each of four successive defeats with a cheerful Irish smile and a promise to try again.

The 1930 challenge probably is Lipton's last. It also seems likely to be his best and perhaps successful, if there is anything in the law of averages and wind enough in the sails of Shamrock the Fifth.

A good deal of the popular Yankee sympathy for Sir Thomas is based on the belief he is being "ganged" by rich and powerful American syndicates of sportsmen, striving to keep the classic trophy in this country. Lipton has put all his hopes in one yacht. The defending forces, rivals among themselves for the honor of racing the Shamrock, built four sloops. Thus the American chances of finding the right boat for the job are increased at the outset with sufficient trials to test the ability of the Westamoe, Yankee, Enterprise and Whirlwind.

Westamoe, the Morgan-Nichols yacht, has run up a big lead in the preliminary tests, so much so that predictions already are being freely made that this craft will draw the blue-ribbon assignment.

Coonskin coats are still in the moth-balls but the Football Rules Committee has completed and published its re-codification of the gridiron regulations—a task that has taken years of study, compilation, revision, checking and double-checking by the committee headed by Edward K. Hall as chairman and William B. Langford as secretary. The final result is a tribute to the energy and far-sightedness of these men, who, without any crowd to give them a cheer from the side-lines, have put through a tough job. They are hereby given a "long yell" from this corner for making it infinitely easier now to find out what the great college game is all about and why.

The Army-Illinois football game in New York isn't until next November but already more reservations have been made for it than for a return box-fight between Schmeling and Sharkey. Which is at least a tribute to somebody or something or other.

Self-Quarrels

Observation Glasses

In order to watch horses, automobiles, etc., at a distance of 6 or 8 miles the bureau of standards says that a 6 or 8-power binocular or a 20-power telescope is recommended. If fine details are to be examined the telescope is the better.
