The law of supply and demand ought to be enforced upon the weather.

At last count there were 48 of the United States, each of them confident that home-grown strawberries are best.

If they tore down a few billboards they might find the small rural towns the census takers say are disappearing.

Dangerous Days in the Wild West: A boy in Yakima, Wash., advertises for exchange, "A 44 Colt's six-shooter, in good condition, for a Hawaiian guitar."

Some advice, designed to aid in prevention of forest fires and consequent loss of valuable natural resources of the Northwest, is given to The Observer by the United States forest service.

THE FOURTH OF JULY Perhaps we are so free with our uses of the Fourth of July because it is signally and tremendously the day of freedom.

This is particularly true in Eastern Oregon, which nature and man have blessed with a plentiful and diversified supply of playgrounds.

A holiday is a treasure to be used thoroughly; we can be patriots dyed in the wool, genuine and potent, and also play golf, go picnicking or fishing, see a boat race or take whatever other diversion attracts us tomorrow.

There may be those among the older men and women who wonder whether, proportionately, as many of the whole people today know the story of American freedom and solemnly appreciate its meaning.
