A GENIUS SPEAKS

That genius of international finance, Owen D. Young, is the author of a political policy in international affairs which President Hoover might have pronounced as a most appropriate statement to accompany a veto of the tariff bill.

Mr. Young's address to the National Electric Light Association went to the heart of the nation's present economic problem—surpluses. He divided them into agricultural, raw material, industrial, service and earnings surpluses, and said they can only be disposed of by cultivating good-will, extending credit and exchanging goods.

When our political policy in international affairs becomes cooperative in spirit, which need not involve us in entanglements or alliances; when our economic policy looks to the economic development of the world as a whole and the improvement of living conditions everywhere, when our tariffs and our treaties are made to evidence this spirit (because we are under suspicion now), then we may hope for effective plans for farm relief, for reduction of our surplus of raw materials and manufactured products, for relief of unemployment and for what is most important of all—a better spirit of all nations toward us and toward each other.

THE THINGS YOU EAT

The reverse of the old saying that men dig their graves with their teeth is presented by Dr. E. V. McCollum, professor of chemical hygiene, Johns Hopkins University. He asserted longevity, physical and mental alacrity, general well being and happiness can be had by proper diet.

But he is undoubtedly right when he says that the appetite alone is not a safe guide, citing that some appetites ask for immoderate quantities of tobacco, alcohol, sugar, habit forming drugs. Experience teaches that some foods which are extremely palatable to the individual derange his digestion.

The trained dietitian has proved himself able to cure many illnesses and build up depleted strength. While he might not be able to bring about "general well being and happiness" in every case, it doubtless would be of value to anyone to consult one. Then, if the patient did not follow the advice received he would at least know what was wrong with him.

Chats With Parents

MARJORY'S FIGHT By Alice Jackson Peale Marjory had waited patiently for her turn at the swing, and then just as she went up to take it another little girl rushed in ahead of her.

Without preface, Marjory attacked her. She pounded her with her fists and had drawn blood with her nails by the time the teacher reached her and pulled her away.

She removed Marjory from the scene and allowed her to become quiet before they talked things over. Marjory was on the defensive.

"That little girl made you very angry, didn't she?" the teacher began quietly.

"Yes, she did—and, and—" hesitatingly—then in a sudden burst of confession, "I just hate her!"

"Yes, I know you hated her and I don't blame you. I get angry at people too sometimes when they do things like that to me. But I don't hit them because I know that if I did I would only get into a lot of trouble."

"You mustn't hit people either, especially someone who is smaller than you are, an that little girl was. I'll go back with you now and you can explain to her that it was your turn and I'm sure she will give up the swing to you."

"They went back to the playground. The atmosphere was cleared and there was no further trouble."

"That little episode was wisely handled from more than one point of view. The child learned the practical solution to her difficulty. She was not made to feel guilty nor put through the forms of repentance for having given vent to unsocial but wholly natural impulses."

She was made to understand that it pays to cultivate self-control.

Health Talks

FELT FIRST In the old swimming hole, if you dove in feet first, the practice was to pinch your nose and shut your eyes. Just why that was done the boys did not know except that it was the general practice and that not infrequently, general practice has reason behind it.

The good reason is that diving in feet first may cause water to enter with some force into the nasal cavities. This, in turn, may give rise to a number of disease conditions of the eyes, nose and throat, the ears and the sinus or the cavities in the head.

The summer season brings a crop of these infections. Many are the result of polluted beaches and unsanitary pools.

It is unsafe to bathe in unknown waters. The stream that appears clean enough at one point may at some point above be the recipient of sewerage waste. Bathing in such water may result in the development of typhoid and other gastro-intestinal diseases.

Swimming pools where the water is not sterilized and not changed often enough, are also dangerous.

There are certain objectionable items connected with swimming pools which everyone ought to avoid. One should not enter who has a cold or suffers from a contagious disease of the eye, nose or throat.

Occasionally one grows deaf of a sudden, after immersion in water. Usually such deafness is due to the obstruction of the outer canal. The obstruction is due to the swelling of the wax present in the ear. The condition is not serious but may be made so by unskilled attempts to remove the obstruction.

SUGAR SUPPLIES CALORIES AT THE LOWEST PRICE

Few Foods Return Such High Caloric Value for the Money

Sugar is an inexpensive food. Compared with butter, bacon, macaroni, bread, meats, milk, green vegetables and fresh fruits, sugar supplies the system with far more calories for each cent spent than the same amount expended on any of the rest of the products named.

This fact is significant because the average system requires approximately 3000 calories daily. Of this amount, sixty per cent should be derived from the carbohydrate group of foods to which sugar belongs.

To get the full value of sugar the housewife should consider it in relation to all the foods she chooses for her table. The most inexpensive balanced meal can be made satisfying and complete by a sweet dessert. Canned vegetables, as well as fresh ones, can be much improved in taste appeal if a dash of sugar to a pinch of salt is added while they are cooking. Breakfast cereals and stewed dried fruits have added goodness when sugar is added.

Doctors and dietitians approve the use of sugar in making essential foods tasty. For these foods contain vitamins, mineral and roughage—all of which are needed by the system. Good food promotes good health. The Sugar Institute.
