Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage.—Gal. 5:1.

THE TREATY

President Hoover was wise in summoning the senate into special session to act on the London naval treaty. The opposition knows that time is its strongest ally, and had the chief executive permitted the matter to rest until a later date, he would have been playing into the hands of the objecting senators.

The treaty may not accomplish all that is hoped for, but it is a move in the right direction and marks a distinct advance in international relationships.

While it appears the opposition can only count on a few followers they can carry on a fight to obstruct, delay and postpone adoption.

Public opinion is strongly in favor of the treaty and the senate cannot afford to evade its duty.

TRAFFIC ACCIDENTS

Motor vehicles last year were responsible for the death of 31,000 people and the injuring of approximately 1,000,000 others. If these casualties had resulted from a war the entire nation would have been aroused.

The great majority of these accidents could have been avoided had the drivers used a little more precaution. As in all lines of activity there are always those who take a chance.

There are thousands of drivers, both men and women, who are operating cars, years in and years out, without being responsible for an accident, and this is largely due to careful driving and consideration for others.

"No automobile accidents during the year" would be a good slogan for all cities to adopt, and there is no reason why La Grande should not be on the honor roll.

Health Talks

HARELIP

The human face is a complicated structure, formed in the embryo (the unborn child) from the union of a relatively large number of bony centers.

Sometimes, for reasons still undetermined, the face does not completely develop before birth.

One of the common results is harelip and cleft palate.

In cleft palate, there is a cleft or space in the roof of the mouth leading into the nasal cavity.

The development defect, particularly when involving the palate, seriously interferes with the normal function of the mouth.

An infant so afflicted finds it difficult to feed and later on finds normal speech almost impossible.

Because of the difficulty in feeding, a relatively large number of the infants born with cleft palate die of inanition.

Heredity appears to play an important part in the production of these defects.

A number of explanations have been offered to account for the failure of the face to complete its normal development.

The explanation most common among the laity is that harelip results from a fright suffered by the mother during the latter part of pregnancy.

This, of course, is an old and popular superstition.

Another explanation offered is that cleft lip and palate result from poison. This explanation does not appear valid.

One of the most interesting, and explanations comes from a Berlin zoo where it was noticed that impure diet brought on a defective development of the jaw of certain animals.

In one year 32 jaguars were born to one mother by the same sire. All these animals had cleft palate. The parents had been fed improperly on cold blooded meat.

When the diet was changed to warm meat still containing blood, 25 jaguar offspring subsequently born were normal in every respect.

The infant born with a harelip or cleft palate should be immediately placed under expert care.

In Washington

By Herbert Plummer
WASHINGTON—The "grand old man" of the army—Maj. Gen. Hugh Lenox Scott—is going to hit the trail again this summer.

Congress has given him $5,000 to spend on a job out in the West among his beloved Indians. In the plains, where he has spent more than 40 years of his life, General Scott is to make a permanent record of the Indian sign language in talking pictures.

Now 76 years old, his hair white as snow, this doughty old Indian fighter is as delighted as a child at the task which lies before him.

One of the world's leading authorities on Indian sign language, which he picked up while campaigning in the west, he is about to do a work which has been hailed by scholars as exceedingly important.

Knows Indians
General Scott is one of the few survivors of the old army.

No outstanding senator, the west preacher, from West Point, turned out from the bottom) he came up through the ranks to the position of chief of staff under Wilson's administration, and for a while was acting secretary of war attending cabinet meetings at the request of the President.

The late General Wood always said that Scott had only to be told what to do and he would do it. It was, the order was executed. He never seems to have failed.

Perhaps the greatest tribute to the man that in the fact that the Indians, with whom he has spent so much of his life, revere and trust him.

Often he has interested for them how they had substantial privy since, he has made an intensive study of every phase of the Indian and his customs.

Still Active
On one occasion he went to President Cleveland and bared a particularly "raw" deal that an Indian had been given. So impressed was Cleveland that he jumped up from behind his desk, and striking one hand into the other in emphatic indignation, he exclaimed:

"I will not permit it. I will see justice done to those Indians as long as I am in power."

Though the general has been in retirement from the army for several years now, he still spends a part of every year in the Indian country. Among all tribes he is welcome.

He has averted many outbreaks and sometimes long Indian wars because of his knowledge of how the Indian may best be approached and influenced.

This summer he will have to drop his duties as chairman of the New Jersey highway commission to accomplish the task congress has laid out for him.

Chats With Parents

By Alice Jackson Peake
Everywhere, even at home, I've seen a father, a full child. He is independent, active, full of ideas and able to take care of himself in ordinary difficulties.

Only at home is he hard to handle. There is always his mother to distract him by whispering constantly.

Ever since he was a baby this has been so. His mother had long ago accepted his chronic complaining and teasing as a fixed attribute of his personality.

It was not until his excellent adjustment at school and in free neighborhood play with other children that I discovered that he was quite capable of being a regular fellow that his eyes were opened.

Emma's whispering, she realized, was not so much a fixed attribute of his character, as a trained response to her.

Children often show in relation to their parents, faults that exist in no other situation. Many of the acute difficulties of children may be definitely traced to the personal equation between parent and child.

When it is clear to you that your child behaves worse with you than with anyone else or that he shows in his attitude toward you unpleasant qualities which are in evidence nowhere else, you will find it helpful to critically analyze your own attitude in relation to him.

entered the discussion at yesterday's session after reports had become current he donated money toward the prosecution of the same offense.

Hand Questioned
Jergens' name was brought out after J. Page Bond, of Portland, had testified he overheard Clifford and Clark talking together and large sums of money were mentioned, as was a "50-50 break."

Home Brew Figures
ST. LOUIS, July 18 (AP)—Homebrewing promised to figure prominently in the race for the republican nomination for prosecuting attorney here.

Parole Is Revoked
SALEM, Ore., July 18 (AP)—Governor Norblad today revoked the parole of Fred Morse, who was received at the state penitentiary from Lane county in September, 1928, to serve two years for burglary. He was paroled in July, 1929.

Revelation in Industry
The term "industrial revolution" is applied to the change in industry brought about by the inventions which distinguished the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. It is a term that is not considered appropriate by some people, but is a well-established phrase.
