"Melody Man" At State Theater

A subtle, sympathetic, soul-stirring musical epic with jazz and the classics skilfully blended was unfolded on the screen of the State Theater last night. It is "The Melody Man," the Columbia all-talking, musical drama with William Collier, Jr., Alice Day and John St. Polis.

The underlying motive is a conflict of age with youth—the former in the guise of an old musician who loves the music of the masters; the latter, a youthful leader of a jazz band. A beautiful romance is built up around the old musician's daughter and the youthful Paul White-man. Conflict arises with the old man's unreasoning hatred for anything that is even remotely identified with the jazz that he hates. Still another plot is furnished by the crime that the old musician had committed at the very apex of his career in Vienna. His musical genius eventually betrays him. A surprise climax results.

Convincing performances were given by the entire cast. John St. Polis, in the role of the musician adapted the mannerisms of his characterization perfectly. Credit is extended to R. William Nelli for his restrained and artistic direction.

DAIRYMEN OF UNION ISSUE STATEMENT

operative, to risk calamity by further rebuffs, it is pointed out by persons interested in early consummation of plans for construction. It is believed generally that the Farmer's Cooperative creamery board acted in good faith in selecting the site of the creamery, although some have questioned the selection. Early completion of the Union county plant will make it possible for local producers to put high quality cream to the churns of the cooperative, while further delays will mean the grading down of much cream whose quality depreciates rapidly on the long haul to Baker.

"Progress of the dairy industry in Union county to the point where it could induce the Farmer's Cooperative creamery to locate a unit here has been quite rapid, although not without its ups and downs. For a time it seemed possible that a joint creamery for the two counties, Baker and Union, might be located at Union, but further action of the creamery to the west resulted in the awarding of a creamery to each county. The Commercial creamery at Baker was purchased and remodeled for the use of the Baker county group who signed contracts totaling more than $300 cows. A campaign in Union county resulted in the signing of the required 4000 cows, with additional territory represented in Wallowa county.

"Signers of the Union county contracts agreed to leave the location of the creamery to an expert furnished by the Challenge Cream and Butter association of California, the huge cooperative marketing association of the west coast. E. B. Hopkins, of that association, visited the valley in May, surveyed the cow population, viewed potential sites, studied the location of producers, exhaustively considering every angle including cost of fuel, disposal of sewage wastes, transportation, and numerous other factors. Mr. Hopkins finally chose Union as the best site, which action was verified soon after by a meeting of the general board of the association in Union, at which time a site on Catherine creek in the center of town was chosen and title accepted."
