Health Talks

PHYSICAL AND PSYCHOLOGICAL
The body, late, to use the common vernacular, has gone "psychological."

As if to amend for the centuries of neglect and ignorance, psychology ideas have caught the fancy of the man in the street and terms of the specialty have been incorporated in his every-day speech.

In the long run this popular concern with psychology is bound to prove helpful. A certain amount of caution, at this time, however, would tend to minimize the hazard involved in the too-ready acceptance of exaggerated ideas.

Even as formerly major emphasis was placed upon the physical condition and little thought given to the psychological, so today there is a tendency for excessive emphasis upon the psychological, with little or no thought to the physical. This is particularly true of child health.

It was not so long ago that the intelligence quotient of the child was considered a fixed, qualitative index to the child's intelligence.

Nowadays, however, we have witnessed how the intelligence quotient of a child may be raised through improved nutrition, the correction of physical defects, and the improvements of health habits.

In many a problem-child, so-called, the source of the difficulty lies in defective vision or impaired hearing, or in the irritability that so often goes with malnutrition.

Achievement in school work, it has been demonstrated time and time again, depends not only upon inherent intelligence but upon the physical condition of the child—upon the tonus and the size of the adenoids, for instance.

In a recent study on the effects of the removal of tonsils and adenoids in children suffering from these and kindred conditions, it was found that even in those mentally below normal, intelligence improved as physical handicaps were removed.

"A healthy mind in a healthy body" is an old and hackneyed expression, but despite its bromidic character it still is as valid today as it was when first coined. The physical underlies the psychological, and the two are closely interdependent.

Unprecedented drought conditions in the Wamic district were described here by T. Leland Brown, county water master, who left to arrange transfer of water from a highland irrigation system to ditches on the lower area ranches in order to provide a supply for stock watering and domestic purposes.

Brown said irrigation records do not reveal a similar shortage of water, and White river was never lower than at this season. Snowfall deficiency of last winter is blamed.

Although irrigation on streams in the immediate vicinity of The Dalles is cut to a minimum, conditions here are not as serious as in the southwestern part of the county.

Serious failure of the city's gravity water system, supplied from Dog river, was overcome by pumping from a well developed several years ago.

Surplus of Help In State, Report Today Indicates

PORTLAND, July 25—The following is a report according to districts or localities, of seasonal employment conditions in Oregon:

Portland—There is a surplus of workers in all lines of work in this locality, both local and transient. Present indications point to a continuance of this condition throughout the season.

Gresham—Raspberry harvest is now on in this locality and cucumbers and blackberries will be harvested soon. There will be a large surplus of unemployed as soon as the berry harvest is over.

Curvallis—Berry and cherry harvest is nearly over and we have a surplus of help all along and expect this condition to continue.

McMinnville—We have a large surplus of unemployed in all lines of work. Haying is on and harvest will soon begin. Combine reduce the demand for laborers here in the grain harvest. We expect a surplus of labor throughout the season.

Newberg—Berries, cherries and hay harvest is now on and grain will be harvested soon. We have a surplus of help on hand and expect this condition to continue.

Salem—Hay and wheat harvest is on in this locality and we have plenty of help on hand. We expect to have plenty of help throughout the entire season.

Albany—We have a surplus of unemployed in this locality and expect to have sufficient help throughout the entire season.

Eugene—There is a surplus of laborers here, most noticeable in the lumber industry. Hay harvest, cherry picking and the binding of grain are in progress. Threshing of grain will start soon. Present indications are we will have plenty of help throughout the entire season.

Hood River—Since early spring we have had a surplus of workers, both local and transient, and this condition still exists. We can use no more help until the fall crop of pears and apples are ready to pick. The season will probably extend over a period of six to eight weeks. We expect to have an abundance of common labor during the apple harvest, but there will be a strong demand for experienced pear and apple packers and sorters.

The Dalles—There is a surplus of workers in all lines and this condition is expected to last throughout the season. Wheat harvest is on and will last about two months.

La Grande—We have a surplus of workers here, most noticeable in agricultural districts. Fruit picking is practically over now and harvest will soon start. The wheat harvest commenced July 21st and workers will be required for a month, or so. A conservative check shows 217 local men out of work and there is no work at all for outsiders.

Pendleton—Grain harvest is now on and we have a surplus of help. We expect to have a surplus of workers throughout the entire season.
