Art Schools At Harvard, Oregon Are Under Way

UNIVERSITY OF OREGON, Eugene, Ore. (Special)—Through a grant from the Carnegie corporation, 14 teachers and intending teachers of art in the smaller colleges of the West are receiving instruction at the University of Oregon school of architecture and allied arts during the present summer session, with all traveling, tuition and living expenses paid. There is only one other such center in the United States, and it is at Harvard university, where 20 teachers were trained last year.

Due to the great expense of paying the railroad fare of teachers who must travel all the way across the United States to attend the Harvard school, it was decided to install a center on the coast. The University of Oregon was selected by the educational committee of the American Institute of Architecture, through which the grant was awarded, because of its central location, and the excellence of its art school.

A liberal bonus will also be given the teachers at the end of the summer session for the purchase of teaching materials when they return to their home colleges. Prof. W. R. B. Wilson, of the local architecture school, is director of the art center, which is being held during the six weeks summer session.

Those in training at the university are Marie Ring, Oregon Normal school; Gretta Coeking, Lewiston State Normal, Idaho; Gladys Johnson, Washington State Normal; Virginia Penrose, Whittman college; Eva E. Kirton, State Normal school, Albion, Ida.; Frances Westfall, College of Idaho; Edith Schutzbach, Washington State Normal school, Cheney; Sister Madeline Wildo, Mt. Angel Normal, Frances Falck, University of Montana; Mrs. Ida Cochran, College of Puget Sound; Kenneth Manion, Eastern Montana Normal, Billings; Norman E. Wood, Gooding College, Idaho; and T. J. Prichard, University of Idaho.

ARCHDUKE EXAMINES CROP CONTROL PLAN

SÃO PAULO (AP)—Studying Brazilian methods of controlling coffee exports and prices to see if such a plan can be used for the wheat of his own country Archduke Albert of Hungary spent several weeks in this state.

He was interested in Sao Paulo also because of the large number of Hungarians settled here.

Discussing the wheat situation in his country, Prince Albert said: "Often we must compete with wheat from the United States in European markets, and on occasions we have had serious crises in agriculture under these conditions. It is necessary that Hungarians should know all means which other countries use for the defense of their products in foreign markets."

The duke said that Hungary's economy when the Southwest Conference was held in recent years were due mainly to the waste of the war on which the country spent $200,000 daily for more than four years.

BALANCED GRIDIRON RACE SEEN IN SOUTHWEST LOOP

DALLAS, Tex. (AP)—An evenly balanced grid race is in store for the fall when the Southwest Conference football season gets under way less than two months ahead.

Of the seven schools, only Arkansas and Rice are being counted out of the championship fight, while the other teams, Texas Christian, Southern Methodist, Baylor, University of Texas and Texas A. and M. will be more powerful than usual.

Conference schools will engage in more inter-sectional clashes than ever before. The big day will be Oct. 4, when Southern Methodist meets Notre Dame at South Bend, Baylor ties into Purdue at Lafayette, and the Texas Aggies invade the Nebraska Cornhuskers' stronghold at Lincoln. All seven conference squads will have their initial workouts September 10.

Only three times since Davis Cup play was inaugurated in 1900 has America failed to have a team in the finals.

X-Ray Tests Expected to Effect New Plants, Better Animal Breeds

By Charles A. Grumlich (Associated Press Staff Writer) COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP)—New plant varieties, improved animal breeds and hitherto undiscovered evidence on the mechanism of heredity, variation and evolution are expected from the X-ray laboratory.

X-rays have been made to bring about changes in heredity called mutation, in a brief space compared with the long, uncertain period of the leisurely-occurring natural mutations.

They have penetrated the body and germ cells with radiation which caused rearrangement and alteration of the particles known as genes and chromosomes.

One of the scientists obtaining favorable results from this work, sponsored by the National Research Council and the National Academy of Sciences, is Dr. Stadler of the University of Missouri college of agriculture.

Working on corn and apples principally, he has obtained nearly 400 mutations, while no such changes were noted by natural mutation in similar plants under comparison.

Dr. Stadler obtained a single corn plant with one green and one yellow stalk. He produced another corn school; Gretta Coeking, Lewiston State Normal, Idaho; Gladys Johnson, Washington State Normal; Virginia Penrose, Whittman college; Eva E. Kirton, State Normal school, Albion, Ida.; Frances Westfall, College of Idaho; Edith Schutzbach, Washington State Normal school, Cheney; Sister Madeline Wildo, Mt. Dry Diggins Is Used Once More—As Mohair Farm

GRANTS PASS, Ore. (AP)—When the afternoon sun casts its slanting shadows upon the ore-laden hills of Josephine county there comes from beneath the shade-cooled pines a herd of goats to crop the scrub oaks in a gully-washed clearing.

To the transcontinental tourist, cushion-collared and milk-mad, the presence of the goats means nothing; the scrub oaks mean nothing; the gullies mean nothing; the neat piles of rock mean nothing.

It has been said it can trace its discovery to the fact children of miners in the neighborhood used to go to the hillside after a rain to gather gold. Once the sun blasted away on the clay and granite for an hour the pan would yield nothing.

Once miners gained the secret of its wealth water was piped to it and there was washed from its sides thousands upon thousands of dollars. Observations made in the washes of the place reveal the heavy handiwork of workmen flown. Every goat with their golden fleece.

Even though its history is filled with adventure, realization of wealth, disappointment of failures, the same fate that blazed mining fame in Brownstown, Valde, Kerbyville, and a score of other wideopen places passed Dry Diggins with a nod.

The miners tolled upon its hillside for the gold but they went other places to powder in the alcoholic mist of such days as Billy Nagel's joint or the place kept by old Dutch Bachelor. Praying Ryan, a character who used to work on the railroad and preach in the purple twilight of the summer days, used to make regular calls to Dry Diggins.

Like a meteor in the western sky Dry Diggins showed its gold-tinted light across the mining world then slowly dimmed in the horizon of mankind's memory.

For years the place that once resounded to the tune of picks and pans slept in the silence of a ghost town.

Then came Rob Jackson and his handiwork of workmen flown. Every goat with their golden fleece.

den in the roots of the scrub oaks and madrones Dry Diggins has a record of wealth. Each gully is a grave of a Chinaman, each cluster of gathered granite a hand-tooled monument to those yellow workmen who so greatly assisted in writing western romance into the hills and rills of Southern Oregon.

Dry Diggins got its name, like Grave creek, Louise creek, Starvation creek, Butcher Knife creek, and a number of other points because the name best told what it represents.

Dry Diggins was given its name simply because it was dry digging. In its dry state the hillside represented nothing more than clay and granite. Saturated with water it glistened like acres of diamonds.

It has been said it can trace its discovery to the fact children of miners in the neighborhood used to go to the hillside after a rain to gather gold. Once the sun blasted away on the clay and granite for an hour the pan would yield nothing.
