Shy Mother Spends Two Billions Each Year — But Can Scrub and Cook

MOSCOW (AP)—A modest, self-effacing mother directs the spending of nearly two billion dollars annually for Soviet Russia.

And she still can make all her own clothes and do her own cooking!

Barbara Nikolaevna Yakovleva holds one of the world's biggest jobs. She is Russia's commissar of finance, a post comparable to that of Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the U. S. treasury.

Salary Is Small

Her salary is $150 a month—a tenth of Mellon's—although millions of rubles pass through her hands daily.

She is the only woman member of the Soviet cabinet and only one other nation, England, has a woman cabinet member.

Once an obscure revolutionist, hunted by the czar's secret police, Madame Yakovleva watches expenditures of the government with the shrewd eye of a careful housewife. In her vast financial household she employs 15,000 men and 2,000 women.

She, herself, toils 16 to 18 hours a day, Sundays and holidays included.

She lives in a small, 8-room flat near a workers' settlement with her aged parents and her two children.

Still Can Scrub Floors

Her husband, also a revolutionary, is superintending construction of a big factory at Saratov, on the Volga.

Years of privation and hardship taught Madame Yakovleva to be intensely practical.

That is why she does not conceal that fact that she can still scrub floors, wash clothes, make all her own dresses and do her own cooking.

She wears no jewelry or other embellishments and does not believe in short skirts, lipstick, face powder, or expensive dress and lingerie. Her habitual garb is a plain, inexpensive white shirtwaist, with black skirt and lisle stockings.

Looks Mother's Part

To your correspondent she looked the part of a good mother, a woman of quiet demeanor, neatness and great charm. She is 46, fair, with blue eyes, chestnut hair and a soft even voice.

Her only hobbies are mathematics, music and the radio. She holds a master's degree in higher mathematics and is an excellent pianist. She sometimes finds time to go to the theatre, the ballet or a concert.

Her present high post was won by the hardest toil and unremitting service to the revolution.

Five times she was exiled or imprisoned by the czarist regime, spending years in Siberia.

She knew and worked with Lenin and Trotsky.

Shy About Self

She is shy about herself, extremely reluctant to discuss her own life, achievements or talents. Insisting that in the U. S. S. R. it is the system, not the individual, that counts.

"Our government gives every one an equal chance for success," she said. "I must not be regarded as an exceptional case. All women in the Soviet Union are given the same opportunity. Many other women besides myself hold important executive positions. Several are presidents of regional governments."

"Within a few years we probably shall have hundreds of women in high administrative posts."

Nearly 20,000 trees, two-thirds evergreens, were planted in demonstration shelterbelts on Iowa farms this year.

Meeting the Needs of Millions of People

The low-priced automobile has brought greater opportunity and added hours of recreation to millions of men and women

BECAUSE the automobile is such an important factor in the lives and prosperity of so many people, the purpose of the Ford Motor Company is something more than the mere manufacture of a motor car.

There is no service in simply setting up a machine or a plant and letting it turn out goods. The service extends into every detail of the business—design, production, the wages paid and the selling price. All are a part of the plan.

The Ford Motor Company looks upon itself as charged with making an automobile that will meet the needs of millions of people and to provide it at a low price. That is its mission. That is its duty and its obligation to the public.

The search for better ways of doing things is never-ending. There is ceaseless, untiring effort to find new methods and new machines that will save steps and time in manufacturing. The Ford plants are, in reality, a great mechanical university, dedicated to the advancement of industry. Many manufacturers come to see and share the progress made.

The greatest progress comes by never standing still. Today's methods, however successful, can never be taken as wholly right. They represent simply the best efforts of the moment. Tomorrow must bring an improvement in the methods of the day before. Hard work usually finds the way.

Once it was thought impossible to cast gray iron by the endless chain method. All precedent was against it and every previous experiment had failed. Many men had shut their minds to the possibility of change. But fair prices to the public demanded that wasteful methods be eliminated in this operation. Finally the way was found and old methods gave place to new.

A better way of making axle shafts saved thirty-six million dollars in four years. A new method of cutting crankcases reduced the cost by $500,000 a year. The perfection of a new machine saved a similar amount on such a little thing as one bolt. Then electric welding was developed to make many bolts unnecessary and to increase structural strength.

Just a little while ago, an endless chain conveyor almost four miles long was installed at the Rouge plant. This conveyor has a daily capacity of 300,000 parts weighing more than 2,000,000 pounds. By substituting the tireless, unvarying machine for tasks formerly done by hand, it has made the day's work easier for thousands of workers and saved time and money in the manufacture of the car. All of these things are done in the interest and the service of the public—so that the benefits of reliable, economical transportation may be placed within the means of every one.
