 The committee is composed of representatives of the American Federation of Labor, United States Chamber of Commerce, the Manufacturers' association, Industrial Conference board, Railway Employees and other labor organizations, National Bureau of Economic Research, Committee on Economic Changes, Director Stewart of the Bureau of Census and Commissioner Stewart of the labor department's statistics division. The latter two will be ex-officio members.
 Mr. Hoover said the committee would advise the government departments on methods for revision of the statistical services for the determination of unemployment, and to establish methods of cooperation between government departments and business.

Ozarks Farmer, Who Says He's 118, Plans Next Birthday Party Soon
 POPLAR BLUFF, Mo. (AP)—Speaking of longevity and 150-year-old Ozarks, here's a "chap" from the Ozarks who claims 118 summers and who was too old to serve in the Civil War.
 Just now, while Zoro Agha the Turk is demonstrating to America the spryness of his reputed 150 years, Thomas N. Kemp is planning to celebrate his 119th birthday anniversary soon.
 This American-born patriarch says September 10, 1811, was the date of his birth, and folks around Poplar Bluff generally accept his claim.
 When the War of 1812 broke out, Kemp says, he was just toddling around learning to walk. He says he remembers the presidential election of 1816 and every campaign since.
 Outside of being partially deaf, Kemp says he's "as well as a man reasonably can expect to be when he's nearing his 119th birthday." His memory still is good and his eyesight keen.
 He still likes to cultivate his farm—and he says he's been farming for 110 years, since he was eight. Even now he always can find time to get out his shotgun and go hunting "with the young folks."
 "I was born in Huntingdon, Carroll county, Tennessee," says the aged farmer. "My parents, Aaron and Tabitha Kemp, died when I was young. I was working regularly when I was eight."
 "And in those days," Kemp recalls, boys had to work from the time they could lift a hoe."
 His first "regular" job was as a rider on the Pony Express and Mail. He was married in Kentucky in 1836, and his first wife died five years later. Two children were born to them.
 In 1841 he was married again, this time to the sister of his first wife. She died 40 years later. They were the parents of seven children, six of whom are dead. One daughter, Amanda, is 58, and Kemp makes his home with her.
 "Some persons doubt my age," says Kemp, "but my daughter and other relatives have checked all possible sources, and they are certain I was born in 1811."
 "Of course I am looking forward to many more birthdays," he insists.

Half Marriage" Writer Reveals New Technique
 Dialogue writing for talking pictures comprises an entirely new technique. Ability in writing stage plays and silent scenarios is helpful in this new branch, but falls short of being sufficient.
 This is the idea of Jane Murlin, one-time stage playwright, who also has had broad experience writing silent screen scenarios before joining Radio Pictures as a dialogue writer for RKO talking pictures.
 Miss Murlin's latest achievement in dialogue writing is to be seen now at the State Theatre, where Radio Pictures' all-talking, all-musical production, "Half Marriage," is being shown.
 "The average stage play may have as many as 20,000 to 30,000 words," Miss Murlin points out in discussing the difference each spoken word in a first play occupies approximately a foot of film if the dialogue is properly spaced.
 "This makes it readily apparent that spoken words in a picture can be nothing like what they are on the stage, also feature pictures would run from thirty-five to forty-five reels, depending on the length of film used for action in which there was no speaking."
 "In writing for the talking screen, there must not be a single superfluous word. Every word must be weighed carefully and must carry the story forward to the climax. Thus, 4,000 words of dialogue, allowing for some action in which the screen is silent, will be sufficient for a six-reel picture."

Rich Archeological Find Is Reported
 TOLUCA, Mexico, July 30 (AP)—One of the richest archeological finds in Mexico in many years was announced Tuesday with the discovery of the pre-Aztec city of Calixtlahuaca, a short distance north of Toluca.
 Eleven temples, a number of pyramids and many valuable specimens were found, according to first reports.
 Several excursions are being planned in the hope of further discoveries.

PARIS ENLISTED FOR FEATHERWEIGHT HATS
 PARIS (AP)—Tulle berets and lace straw evening bonnets are midsummer developments.
 The tulle hats introduce fullness by way of shirring. Lace straw bonnets are almost as light in weight as hats of horsehair and fit the head closely, providing protection for the season's fluffy hair styles.

CAPE'S POPULARITY FLEETING IN PARIS
 PARIS (AP)—Capes have had their day here, and it was a short one.
 Already capes and cape scarves are being discarded for short jackets and straight line boleros. Cape collars are the last reminder of a style that is going out.
 Evening wraps in their freshest manifestation also snub cape effects. Some new wraps have collars which develop into panel trains. Others become intricate incrustations that continue to heel-length hemlines.

HESSEAN FLY AGAIN HITS IOWA'S WINTER WHEAT CROP
 AMES, Iowa (AP)—Winter wheat in Iowa has been seriously damaged by the Hessian fly for the first time in five years.
 Dr. Carl J. Drake, state entomologist, says the pest has been creeping back for two years and that farmers must fight it again to prevent damage.
 Carelessness because of the fly's absence has contributed to the present situation, Dr. Drake believes. Farmers have been using combines, which require that wheat stand until it is much riper than when cut with a binder, and the grain that shatters has sprouted and produced an early growth favorable to the insect.

AUTOMOBILES FOLLOW HORSE
