In Washington

My Hardest Plummer
WASHINGTON—The late Ford the-ater on Fourth street in the capital, a structure which is an anachronism in appearance to its history is being torn down to make way for a new building.

Bright Sayings
For some time there has been a pool of water adjoining the fire hydrant in front of the Presbyterian church. The other day a little girl and her mother passed by, and the little girl, who had accompanied them, stopped at the pool for a drink. The little girl noticed this and exclaimed: "Mother, look, Scotty is drinking fire-water."

No Home for Him
When Malcom Ith Almur ruled over the Moors, he wanted the finest palace in the world. Workers from all parts of the world built the Alhambra, but it wasn't finished for 100 years.—Country Life.

Snuff and Sand
The man who used to take a pinch of snuff and make a sneeze of it, has a son who takes a pinch of sand and makes a sneeze of it.—Arkansas Gazette.

Slightly in Error
When a fruit firm was fined at Brighton, England, for displaying American apples labeled "home produce," the defense was the manager's thought. California, Washington and Oregon were parts of the British empire.

Been Studying Einstein?
Railroad officials said that the train this morning was forced by freight trains to stop at Juliette and then to stop again at Sandy, 17 miles south of Locust Grove at a good rate of speed.—New York Times.

Enjoy the Sunshine Today
"It is not well," said Hi Ho, the sage of Chinatown, "to neglect the sunshine of today in order to think of storms the future may bring."—Washington Star.

Cadmium Turns Gold Green
Cadmium is one of the rare metals, the world production being about half a million pounds a year. When mixed with gold it makes a green alloy.

Exchange of Sympathy
Sympathy is more plentiful than you may suppose. For instance, a woman with a baby and a woman with a pet dog feel sorry for each other.—Grand Rapids Press.

That Payment Plan
There are few people who aren't looking forward to some day owning something they've already been using for months.—Arkansas Gazette.

We'd Hate to Yell It
The official name of the country we call Russia is Soyuz Sovetskikh Sotsialisticheskikh Republik, a rather long name to sew on a basketball suit.—Detroit News.

Greatest Benefits
You will confer the greatest benefits on your city, not by raising its roofs, but by exalting its souls.—Epictetus.

When Did it Ever End?
An English clergyman breaks into print with the prediction there will be a war between the sexes. We weren't aware the present one was over.—Muskegon Chronicle.

Sound of Thunder
The weather bureau says that thunder is seldom heard more than 20 miles and usually not over 10 to 15 miles.

National leaguers believe that Chuck Klein will lead the circuit's home run leaders this season.

Foreign
Panama City—Two quakes rock Canal zone.
London—Dean Roscoe Pound, of Harvard law school, nominated for judge of permanent court of arbitration.
Mexico City—General Juan Andres Almazan urges that Mexico be an ally of the United States in any future war.

Sports
Washington—President Hoover watches Athletics beat Washington. New York—Tuffy Griffiths wins technical knockout over Tom Heeney.

SMILES

A Difficult Task
There was a dear little baby on the train and an old gentleman was interested. The following conversation ensued:
O. G.: A fine child, madam. I trust he will grow up and upright and honest like his mother.
Mother (smiling): Yes, but it will be rather difficult.
O. G.: As the twig is bent, so the tree's inclined.
Mother: But the trouble is, the twig is bent on being a girl.

The hunt for the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow usually leads to the potter's field.

If all people loved their neighbors as they do themselves, this world would be a glorious place in which to live.

When you are tempted to tell your girl that she looks sweet enough to kiss, remember that actions speak louder than words.

The supply of Ford jokes seems to be nearly exhausted, and even those about the Scotch is getting low. The last one we heard was to the effect that a Scotch man called up his grandfather in the poorhouse and reversed the call.

Marked by Charcoal
The "Carbonari" (charcoal burners), a secret patriotic society organized in Italy in the early part of the Nineteenth century, was so-called from the custom of the members blackening their faces with charcoal as a disguise.
Increased accidents are the penalty of modern speed in construction, says a report to the American Institute of Architects.

Health Talks

VACCINATION AGAINST TYPHOID
Every summer and fall brings its epidemic crop of typhoid cases. The time of the outdoors brings to some unwelcome and unfortunate few a taste of misery and discomfort. Typhoid still prevails in the United States, and not a few of the gentle streams and money wells that add romance to the countryside are the recipients of the typhoid-laden seepage.

One may enjoy romance, however, still be free from the danger of infection. To achieve this, one should be vaccinated against typhoid.

It is not safe at any time to drink water from unknown and suspicious streams or wells. However, should one chance to do so, the risk is reduced to a minimum through typhoid vaccination.

This preventive measure incorporates one of the most brilliant and impressive chapters of preventive medicine. For such a long ago typhoid was one of the leading causes of illness and death, both in civil and military life, while today it is one of the still important but lesser ailments.

The practice of typhoid vaccination as a preventive measure began in 1890 and since then has been credited to a high degree.

When typhoid was compulsory, it affected all armies of the civilized world. During the World War, ten million men served in the United States army. With all the risk of exposure to this disease, only 150 typhoid deaths occurred.

Typhoid vaccination involves no risk beyond the soreness that follows the injection. It has been demonstrated that vaccination actually prevents the danger of contracting the disease and influences for the better outcome of an attack.

Witness Living
Perhaps the most keenly interested person in this latest move to establish the status of the theater is Charles S. Wilson, 83 years old and a resident of the capital.

Wilson claims, and as yet he has not been challenged, to be the only living eye witness in Washington of the theater on Good Friday night, April 14, 1905.

He was 18 years old at the time, and remembers the incident vividly. "There was the report of a revolver," he said, and in the great confusion, he was forced to the street.

"I was dazed," said Wilson, describing the event. "As I waited for transportation home to where I lived on Capitol Hill, I remember hearing the shots that Grant and Seaward, too, had been killed."

Washington—Census gives population of the west as 11,814,172, a gain of 2,911,200.

Columbia S. C.—Glenn I. Mc-Night, accused of instigating murder of state senator, removed from hospital to prison.

Washington—Senator Johnson says British ratification of naval treaty exposes British opposition as "rump."

It has studied children's clothing and materials, practical and its influence upon the psychology of the small wearer.

As a result of its investigations, it has evolved various types of clothing which every young mother would be eager to know about. Simplicity, comfort, attractiveness, durability and ease in dressing and undressing have been primary considerations.

Everything from outdoor play suits to bibs and dresses have been designed. Although this new type of clothing is not yet on sale, the patterns for several of the designs may be bought.

Leaflets describing and illustrating the new kind of clothing will be sent free to anyone who writes to the Bureau at Washington.
