Paper Of 1865 Tells of Death Of Pres. Lincoln

An unusually interesting newspaper—the New York Herald of Saturday, April 15, 1865—is now in the hands of Haskell Andrews. The issue is interesting because it tells of the assassination of President Lincoln.

The column inches are about an eighth of an inch wide—used that way in order to give the paper an appearance of being in mourning, and almost the entire front page is taken up with the assassination news.

The headline used on the lead story follows: "IMPORTANT." "Assassination of President Lincoln." "The President Shot at the Theater Last Evening." "Secretary Seward Dagerred in His Bed." "Not Mortally Wounded." "Clarence and Frederick Seward Badly Hurt." "Escape of the Assassins." "Intense Excitement in Washington." "Scene at the Deathbed of Mr. Lincoln." "J. Wilkes Booth, the Actor, the Alleged Assassin of the President." "The Official Dispatch." The lead item is a dispatch from Edwin M. Stanton, secretary of war, to Major General Dix in New York, telling of the actual shooting. On another column of the paper another dispatch from Stanton, Dix tells "Abraham Lincoln died this morning at 22 minutes past 7 o'clock."

The headlines on the lead story on Mr. Lincoln took up more than half of the column, although there was no banner or streamer, as it is sometimes called, used across the top of the page. An excellent drawing of Mr. Lincoln appeared in an extra of the same paper later the same day, which Mr. Andrews also has in his possession.

the people themselves will so declare by their ballots. "The cause of the position in which life long republicans are placed at the present time comes from the fact that in the selection of a republican candidate for governor the public candidate was not selected. The vacancy caused by the death of the late George W. Joseph, the republican voters of the state had no unless you might say the judgment of one man from each county who when selected (except in some instances where the county was not organized, never anticipated that they would be called upon to select a candidate for governor) could be counted as such.

"The fact that after the primaries there remained some eleven counties who failed to elect their precinct committee or organize and it devolved upon the state chairman the duty to appoint a county chairman who in turn organized the county committee. It is perfectly natural that the state chairman, desiring the nomination himself, would appoint one of his own friends to complete the organization, he in turn would naturally see that a state committee friendly to his political benefactor would be selected, these eleven together with a couple of relations and a few more obtained by promise of support for political patronage accomplished the result obtained by the state chairman at the recent state meeting, and this is the action that has caused such universal disapproval in the state.

"The selection of a gubernatorial candidate for the republican party at the state committee meeting, diametrically opposed to the man and principals that he stood for, in total disregard for the 50,000 voters of the state who voted for such a man, and such principals, was the final blow in raising the antagonism of the voters of the state, which has now raised almost to a political revolution. "This same mistake can be made by those who advocate the turning down of the candidates selected by the people themselves at the last primaries."
