Traveling eastward, the storm came out of a murky sky, mixing hailstones, wind and lightning in furious onslaught. Windows in houses were broken and wheat was leveled by the wind. Trees and telephone lines were blown down.

SITUATION SERIOUS

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 5 (AP)—C. J. Buck, regional forester, today said Oregon and Washington timberlands held the "potentialities of a powder magazine," as they have been drained of every vestige of moisture by an unending succession of heat filled days.

Buck said lack of rain has caused the Chain and Colville national forests in Washington to become tinder-like with possibilities of fire greater than 1929. Serious fires raged in both forests last year.

Records, Buck said, indicated 664 individual blazes have been counted in Oregon this year against 368 during the same period last year.
