WILLYS VALVES ARE O. K. AFTER 25,000 MILES

TOLEDO, O., Aug. 14 (AP)—The advancement of modern automobile engineering is probably nowhere better exemplified than in its thoroughness. This thoroughness is reflected in numerous ways. Not only is every part of the modern automobile perfect in itself but it fits perfectly into the machine as a whole, all of which is a result of precision induced by thoroughness. Guesswork has no part in manufacturing motor cars.

"Take the Willys six. Before this car was manufactured the engineers knew on paper just what it could be expected to do, how fast it would go, how durable it was and how much power it would develop. The engineers, however, had to be even more thorough than this. Before the Willys six was placed in production it was given every conceivable test under rigorous operating conditions."

"Here comes the most important news of the week and possibly of the year," says George W. Sutton Jr., in the Springfield Republican and the Buffalo Evening News. "Unless I am mistaken, the new Studebaker President and Commander Eighties contain the most revolutionary mechanical feature brought out in this country for at least five years—free wheeling."

LOCAL MAN IS SUPPLIED WITH LATEST DATA

In this power age, new money-saving methods of farming, logging, contracting, and road building are developed so rapidly that no one can hope to keep abreast of all of the latest developments in any one field. C. W. Bunting, dealer for "Caterpillar" tractors, combines, harvesters, and road-building machinery in East Oregon and Idaho.

For this reason a great corps of "Caterpillar" engineers all over the world are constantly gathering new data on the latest cutting-edge methods. They are studying new equipment and implements for use with tractors. The latest hitches and agricultural hook-ups to use the tractor's power most effectively are worked out by them. New short-cuts in logging are studied and developed.

This unbiased data has been compiled in the set of booklets which have been placed in the hands of all "Caterpillar" dealers, where they can be studied by anyone who is seeking a solution to their power problems. The latest booklets contain information on different kinds of equipment that can be pulled, pushed, or otherwise powered by all five sizes of "Caterpillar" tractors. It represents the products of more than 60 manufacturers.

This book, together with the many more on such subjects as belt power, agricultural hitches, grain, and oil industry, logging, and harvesting, equips "Caterpillar" dealers with the latest facts in all of these activities.

however, was not conclusive. We took the Willys six and put it through test after test. We drove these cars over roads of all kinds, through traffic, in heavy congested centers, on the open road. We drove some of them more than 25,000 miles at speeds of between fifty and sixty miles per hour, hour after hour. And after running up this mileage at these high speeds we found that the engines stood up so well that the valves didn't even need replacing."

AIRMEN GIVEN SAME WARNING AS MOTORISTS

Passengers in airplanes have been placed under the same restrictions as motorists when it comes to throwing lighted cigars, cigarettes, or any other burning material over the side. The man in the clouds and the man on the highway have been put in the same category in the enforcement of outdoor fire prevention rules. It is pointed out by the Oregon State Motor association.

Air commerce regulations contain a provision against dropping or releasing any objects from airplanes which would endanger life or damage property. This is declared to include lighted cigars and cigarettes, according to a letter recently sent by Col. Clarence M. Young, assistant secretary of aeronautics in the department of commerce, to about 9000 registered pilots in the United States. The pilots have been advised that the penalties provided for violations will be strictly enforced.

Ex-Prohi Agent Gives Testimony In Seattle Trial

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 16 (AP)—Preliminary thunder showers of legal storm which will assail the testimony of Al Hubbard, former rum runner and dry agent, now star government witness in the Lyle-Whitney case, frequently interrupted the trial in federal court here Friday.

Defense counsel, barred from questioning the witness directly until government attorneys have completed examination sought through appeals to Judge Frank H. Norcross to have

Hubbard pinned down to exact details in his amazing charges against the five former prohibition heads accused of conniving with rum runners to defeat the dry law.

Time after time A. E. Hilen or Charles P. Moriarty, defense lawyers, interposed their objections to the form of questions addressed by government counsel, Leslie E. Salter, assistant United States attorney general.

Hubbard at Ease The defense attorneys insisted Salter was "leading" his witness. Hubbard, apparently entirely at ease in the witness chair, accused one after another of the defendants of having received protection money from him for the Olmsted ring. William M. Whitney was the first to be charged with receiving a bribe. Hubbard said he paid Whitney $500 and a radio for letting a bootlegger off soon after Hubbard entered government employ as an informer and then a dry agent.

The $500 bribe was followed by a definite agreement between Whitney, Hubbard and Roy Olmsted, the witness testified, by which Olmsted liquor was unmolested, while that of competing bootleggers was "knocked over."

Former United States Attorney Thomas P. Revelle attended a conference of Whitney and Hubbard a week after the protection agreement was made, Hubbard said. Whitney told Hubbard Revelle knew all about the arrangement and approved of it. Hubbard said he testified the conference was arranged after Whitney told Hubbard other persons would have to be taken into the protection plan if it was to succeed.

Hubbard then asserted Whitney told him Earl Corwin, another defendant, at that time chief field agent in the prohibition office, would have to be taken into confidence to prevent his agents from "knocking over" loads of Olmsted liquor.

Recalls Conference Corwin and Hubbard had a conference in Corwin's automobile, the witness said, in which Corwin asked how much it would be worth to cooperate.

Hubbard said he assured him he could expect $700 or $1,000 a month and paid him $100 to show him he meant business. A radio was promised Corwin later, he said.

Olmsted, informed of Corwin's joining the conspiracy cautioned Hubbard that it would be necessary for Corwin to prove that he was able to do something for the Olmsted ring. Daily conferences between Hubbard and Corwin followed, the witness testified, in which Hubbard gave Corwin information about liquor shipments and Corwin arranged to have his agents in some other part of the city.

Hubbard said he paid Corwin an average of $500 or $600 a month. Several months later, Hubbard said, Whitney approached him for payment to Roy C. Lyle, former prohibition administrator and principal defendant, who, Whitney said, was being "pressed" all the time for contributions to the W. C. T. U. and Anti-Saloon League and such organizations. Olmsted consulted about the matter, consented to an initial payment to Lyle through Whitney of $250, Hubbard asserted.

Tells of Payments Numerous payments to Whitney and Corwin were made by Hubbard for the rum ring during the summer of 1925, Hubbard testified. Ten or 12 payments were made for Lyle through Whitney before Hubbard met the witness in the fall of the same year, he said.

The payments were made in Whitney's home or in his car, Hubbard said.
