Home Missionary Society Presents Friendship Quilt

When everyone was busy piecing beautiful quilts last spring the members of the Women's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist church started one of the beautiful "Friendship" quilts for Ruth Margaret Hall. They finished it this summer and say it is a beauty, the quilting is exquisite. Yesterday they went to the home of Mrs. Hall, 707 Fourth street, had a party for Ruth Margaret and surprised her with the quilt. She in turn surprised them by announcing that yesterday was her birthday which the women had not known and which made it all the nicer. There were 30 women present.

New Building To Be Erected On O.S.C. Campus

OREGON STATE COLLEGE, Corvallis (Special)—To provide space for co-operative research work with the federal government, the board of higher education has just let the contract for construction of an addition to the present modern greenhouse ranges on the campus. Thompson Horticultural works of Portland received the contract at $14,800.

The new addition will be a second "headhouse" 180x33 feet and will be connected with the same heating system used on the rest of the range. Completion in 60 days is called for in the contract.

Oregon has been fortunate in obtaining much federal cooperation in investigation work in agriculture, says James T. Jardine, director of the experiment station, making possible much research work of direct value to Oregon farmers that could not be financed from present state sources.

Projects that are in immediate need of the greenhouse space include the work in nut disease investigations, disease control of bulbs and ornamentals, study of the foot-rot disease of wheat, curly top disease investigations with vegetables, and strawberry and small fruit improvement research. Field work in these projects is being conducted throughout the state but laboratory study requires greenhouse space for controlled temperatures and favorable growth conditions.

While this is the only actual building project on the campus this summer, several major improvements to present facilities are under way and will be completed by the time Freshman week opens Sept. 23.

A new chemical engineering laboratory is being fitted out in the old heating plant building near the armory. This fire proof room will afford space for certain heavy types of equipment not possible to use in the present antiquated fourth-floor rooms of science hall that have already been the scene of two fires.

Dr. Charles S. Keevil, formerly of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has arrived to head the work in chemical engineering, succeeding Dr. Howard H. Huggins, who resigned. Dr. Keevil plans to strengthen the engineering phases of the training in this department through emphasis on fundamental unit operations and processes made possible in the new laboratory. Remodeling work is being done in the men's gymnasium to make possible more complete use of space available in the building.

The campus will also have installed by fall a modern street lighting system along its principal thoroughfares. Heretofore the only outdoor campus lighting has been at building entrances and a few isolated lamp posts.

CULLEN ONE OF TWO MEN IN U.S. DOING THIS WORK

Peoria, Ill., where 4500 were present, Mr. Cullen says, adding that either a tuxedo or plain business suit, without the protection of the Rearguard's front and apron, together with the fact that the cap-cases are cut up without the use of a cleaver and on a table covered with a table cloth, adds materially to the effectiveness and novelty of the act.

Following his visit here, Mr. Cullen will leave for Salt Lake City to attend a meeting of wool and lamb growers on Saturday in Salt Lake City. The next week will be spent in Columbus, O.

Mr. Cullen reports that in many instances colleges and universities are using the "cut up" cuts of meats they are demonstrating.
