Thousands of Canners Will Vie For Honors In National Contest

SHENANDOAH, Iowa (AP)—Spurred by 25,000 entries last year, household canners from every state in the union will compete for the $4,250 in prizes offered by the second national canning contest which closes October 1. The canning will be carried on during the entire summer, but all entries must be recorded at the contest headquarters in Shenandoah not later than the October date.

Among those contributing to plans for the contest and who will sit among the judges are Dr. Louise Stanley, director of the federal bureau of home economics, and Mrs. Grace Viall Gray, Chicago, secretary of the contest and nationally known canning expert.

The contest is open to every woman and girl. There are no restrictions on the type of canned food to be entered. Fruit and vegetables will be judged for cleanliness, color, neatness, flavor and texture. The meat entries will be free to use any method of canning they prefer. Standard jars of quart size must be used.

Prizes which include the $500 sweepstakes prize to the grand champion and many other prizes for champions in various classes, will be awarded under auspices of the Household Science Institute.

Last year's championship was won by Mrs. Mary Hyass, farm woman of Kenan, Wis., with a quart jar of green peas.
