having declared this to be far beyond the Milky Way.

Although scientists everywhere are on the verge of revelations, their abhorrence of the term "discovery" is pronounced.

Their fear that the public may give undue credit to those who make these stirring announcements goes back to the method by which the "discoveries" are made.

As an illustration, Dr. Millikan points out that the cosm ray "is a beautiful illustration of the slow step-by-step processes by which most advances in science are made, each experimenter building on the past, but pushing on, if he is fortunate, a little beyond where his predecessors had gone, until presently the world finds itself in the full glory of a new conception of nature without having been conscious of any particular instance which brought the dawn."

In 1903 these rays were brought to light by McMillan, Rutherford and collaborators. Geckel, a Swiss, developed further facts about them in 1910, and Millikan and Bowen in 1922.

Bowles, Woman Enter Pleas Of "Not Guilty"

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 24 (Fr) — Standing side by side before Circuit Judge W. A. Ekwall late Friday, Nelson C. Bowles and Irma G. Loucks pleaded not guilty to the first degree murder of Mrs. Leone C. Bowles, wife of the former.

Mrs. Bowles was stabbed to death in Miss Loucks' apartment on November 12.

Speculators, seeking a glimpse of the pair, jammed the whole fifth floor of the courthouse, standing in corridors and on stairways. The entire force of the sheriff's office, aided by three traffic officers, was required to clear the way to the courtroom for the defendants.

Both defendants appeared in good spirits. Miss Loucks, who has previously appeared in a dark blue ensemble, wore a new brown outfit—a brown suit dress and cocoa-colored fur jacket, with a small, close-fitting brown hat trimmed in gold lace.

When Deputy District Attorney Ben H. Cohn asked if the defendants were ready to plead, defense counsel John Collier responded that both wished to plead not guilty.

Cohn then turned to the defendants. First Miss Loucks and then Bowles said, "not guilty."

Collier and Deputy District Attorney George Mowry told the court that they would agree on a trial date instead of asking the court to set the date. Mowry said the state would be ready at any time and Collier expressed a desire for an early trial.

It was expected today the defense will introduce a motion for a change of venue, but however, such a "good reason" must be demonstrated.

Neither the girl nor Bowles displayed any emotion in tone or bearing as the not guilty pleas were entered.

Bird's Heart Is Photographed By New Type Camera

CLEVELAND, Jan. 24 (Fr) — A bird's heart, as it begins its first timid and hesitant beats in its career for inspiration for future song, has been caught by the micro-movie camera here.

The movie is taken of the embryo, which is dissected from the egg about one or two days after incubation has started. The movie producer is Dr. Bradley M. Patten, professor of embryology, Western Reserve university's medical school.

In the micro-movie the embryo is shown floating in the liquid of the egg. The embryo, microscopic in size, appears on the screen like a giant tadpole or fish, about 5 to 6 feet long. The heart, about a simple, transparent, bulbous tube, occupies a large part of the picture.

At this stage nothing moves but the little bulb. The beating starts before the blood is ready for circulation. Sometimes the pulsation stops for long intervals, and renews its intermittent action.

All this time, the blood is being formed in the membranes of the egg that surround the embryo. After about 38 hours a signal goes out from some unknown source that the heart is ready to begin its work, and the blood starts flowing.

The corpuscles, which are transported in a fluid come to the heart in many branches of vessels and appear on the movie screen like grains of sand traveling down channels.

In his work Professor Patten hopes to discover how the bird grows inside the shell and how the contraction of the heart progresses through it as it beats.

Veller and Zeller Trouble Opponents

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (Fr) — Veller, the short guard, and Zeller, the tall forward, are causing the Indiana university basketball team opposition more trouble this year than they are the scorekeepers who tabulate the games.

Around these two youngsters whose names are the same except for the first letter, the Crimson has developed a fighting, fast working aggregation.

Claron Veller, a left hander, five feet, eight inches tall, and weighing 155 pounds, fired the first shot for the Hoosiers, and he has been hitting the basket regularly ever since.

He is one of the largest men of the Indiana squad, which as a whole is made up of tall players. He is "Fightin' Joe" on football field as well.

Zeller is from the industrial Calumet district. He played with East Chicago high. Veller is from the coal field strip around Linton and played with the high school of that town.

Shoots First "Perfect Hole"

NEW YORK (Fr) — Mrs. Gustav Gardner, of Freeport, L. I., scored the year's first hole-in-one in the New York area.

Medical experts diagnosed this flood of water as due to a dilatation of the liver. Others ascribed it to congestion of the pocket book, the goodly number of table decorated only with democratic beer glasses lending authority to this latter analysis.

Many of the Montmartre resorts, where in previous years one could not buy a seat at a crowded table for $20, closed around two in the morning for lack of customers.

Clark Wood Says

One doesn't need to be in full accord with President Hoover in order to admire him as his newly-assumed role as Boss of The Works.

Politicians who once said that prohibition would never become an issue, now find that it looms so large they can scarcely straddle it.

If modernist art "appeals to the subjective imagination" it is better for that kind of imagination to remain subjective.

Per capital circulation in this country is $74.68, which doesn't help much when some tightwad has one's share.

S. P. Is Willing To Grant Joint User Privileges

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore., Jan. 24 (Fr) — The Southern Pacific is willing to grant joint user privileges to the Great Northern on about 48 miles of its Alturas line southeast of here, but will not consider the Great Northern's first plan of using only 23 miles jointly.

This statement of the Southern Pacific's position was made by E. J. Foulds, counsel, before members of the Oregon public service commission at a hearing here Friday. No representative of California's commission was present.

Foulds said about 48 miles of the line was available for use jointly with the Great Northern, but that his railroad did not urge acceptance of the offer.

Favors Joint Usage The Alturas line could handle more freight, he continued, and expressed his belief that joint use of the track was to the interest of the public.

When L. C. Gilman, executive vice president of the Great Northern, was called to the stand, he declared that his line did not wish joint user privileges there now "even on unconditional terms," because construction has started on the G. N. line near Tule lake.

Under examination by Thomas Balmer, G. N. western counsel, Gilman gave the history of the disagreement, the northern line had refused the S. P.'s offer of joint use of trackage because it was conditional on impossible G. N. concessions, Gilman said.

When negotiations ended, the northern line had made a survey for an independent line east of the S. P. tracks, he said.

Tells of Clash Gilman also told of a clash between the two roads over trackage options and said the Southern Pacific had refused to grant Great Northern traffic rights over tracks from Klamath Falls to the junction of the Cascade and Alturas lines, although the northern line had agreed to pay half the capital charge, full rental and charges of operation and maintenance.

Members of the Oregon commission present were H. H. Corey, acting chairman, O. C. Bostmyer and Hal D. Patton. Patton expected the hearing to end tonight.

TEST OF TARANTULA BITE SHOWS IT'S NOT DEADLY

ATLANTA (Fr) — Contrary to popular belief, the bite of the tarantula is not deadly.

Perry W. Fattig, curator of Emory university museum, tormented a Honduras tarantula, found in a bunch of bananas, until it had bitten him. The curator still is alive.

Venom of the tarantula is not powerful enough to produce death, the curator explained. The most poisonous reptile, he said, is the Egyptian scorpion, but even it is not poisonous enough to cause death in most cases of adults, although 66 per cent of the children bitten die.
