Premiere of 72nd Congress To Be Played Before 71st Makes Its Exit

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the last of three stories by Kirk Simpson, veteran Associated Press staff writer in Washington, dealing with unusual aspects of the new congress. In this article he discusses political oddities which promise to affect issues before the new house of representatives.

WASHINGTON (AP)—The premiere of the seventy-second congress, the congress of "renewed doubt" as the party control in both houses, will be played before the seventy-first congress makes its exit.

On February 26 those Republican members of the house of the seventy-first congress who have been re-elected to the seventy-second—and they are many—will sit in caucus to frame their party slate for the next house, from the speakership down.

Two days later, house Democrats—not so many in holders but with newly elected members trooping to join them—will do likewise.

Kvale in Novel Role. And about that time Rep. Paul J. Kvale of Minnesota, the lone Farmer-Laborite of the new house, will hold that unique "one-man caucus" of which he talks, to decide what his role is to be.

At these first political clan gatherings of the new congress, 418 Republicans, 216 Democrats and Kvale, the only member not allied more or less definitely with either major party, will be present or accounted for.

There were at this writing two house vacancies, two New York City Democrats having died since election. Both were expected to be replaced by Democrats at special elections. It would be something of a political cataclysm if that did happen.

Thus, by the books, the Republicans will have an absolute majority of one vote. Yet that is only by the books. Kvale's one-man caucus, can there be complete harmony of political action and thought?

And what the dissonance within the ranks of the major parties on prohibition, on farm relief legislation, on the tariff, on almost every other issue of the day may produce in a house dominated by only a one-party caucus, Kvale's one-man caucus, a political observer could say with certainty.

Once, in the war congress of 1917, the Democrats organized the house, although there were three more Republicans than Democratic members on the rolls.

Coalition Control Then. There were less than a score of progressives or other independents in that house, holding the balance of power. Also the emergency of war impelled many to yield support to a Democratic administration, through Democratic senate, for war purposes.

No such external emergency confronts the seventy-second congress. Instead, there will be a hot campaign of the kind that has been going on in the office.

Domestic issues that cut deeply across rather than along the recognized lines of political parties—unions, party control, not the wisest political observer could say with certainty.

There are considerations for every representative which urge party loyalty, even in the face of diverging views, if he does not imperil his own re-election.

Committee chairmanships are valuable to those who hold them. They lead prestige; make the holder known back home as a big man in Washington. Also, party regularity means at least a voice in the picking of many federal office holders.

All these things count. They make for party regularity even where the urge of old time party fealty has weakened. They may conceivably decide which party will organize the next house.

Reapportionment On Horizon. Underneath all other troubles of narrow majorities and conflicting intra-party views for that, the congress lies another matter. It will be the last, a political miracle excepted, to be elected on precisely the same geographical district boundaries that now prevail.

Reapportionment of the house under the 1930 census is at hand. It means certain redistricting for some states, possible redistricting for almost all.

Should reapportionment be effected on an exact or even approximate distribution of political power in accordance with the distribution of population, hardly a house member would escape drastic remodeling of his district.

And this is just another of those nebulous uncertainties of the forthcoming seventy-second congress which may loom as perhaps the most interesting session of the federal legislature yet held.

New Bill Would Release Cities From State P.S.C.

SALEM, Feb. 7 (AP)—The desire of Oregon cities to remain outside the jurisdiction of the Oregon public service commission, even if Governor Meier's program of power regulation and development is adopted, caused the introduction of a bill by Senator Burke yesterday in conformity with their wishes. The bill also has the governor's approval and is considered part of his program.

In brief the bill authorizes cities and incorporated towns to secure right to the use of unappropriated waters and it would regulate the operation of electric generating plants and distributing systems by cities and towns, and also regulate rates to be charged by the cities for electric service.

The substance of the bill was originally covered, Senator Burke said, by other power bills in the governor's program, but could not be adjusted satisfactorily to the ideas of municipal officials.

Among the provisions is one that "any filling made by any city or incorporated town upon the unappropriated waters of this state, shall not be subject to appropriation by any other person, municipality or corporation unless it shall be judicially determined that such filling exceeds the reasonable present or future requirements of such city or incorporated town, in which event the surplus or excess may be, by decree of a court of competent jurisdiction, released and discharged from such filling."

Senator Brown, chairman of the senate committee on railroads and utilities announced yesterday that a public hearing on the hydro-electric commission will be held by the senate and house committees jointly next Tuesday morning at 9:30 o'clock in the hearing room at the state house. A joint public hearing will be held Tuesday night in the house of representatives on the grange utility district bill.

BABE RUTH 37 TODAY NEW YORK, Feb. 7 (AP)—Babe Ruth's 37th birthday today coincided with his departure on a steamer for Florida where he will get in shape for his 18th season in the American league.

The great home run hitter of the New York Yankees had as sailing companions his wife and two daughters, Dorothy and Julia. Ruth's immediate objective was Jacksonville and its golf course.

To Uphold Rights Of Chairman Smith WASHINGTON, Feb. 7 (AP)—The department of justice plans to uphold the right of George Otis Smith to office as chairman of the power commission in the coming court test.

This was disclosed in a letter from Attorney General Mitchell to District Attorney Leo A. Rover advising him of the course to be followed on the senate's resolution directing that he bring suit to oust Smith.

Rover was advised to permit the use of his name in proceedings brought by special counsel. He announced he would do this but would take no active part in the court proceedings.

Smith's nomination was confirmed, reconsidered and rejected by the senate which then voted to have a court test instituted. On Mitchell's advice, President Hoover refused to return Smith's nomination and also those of Commissioners Garwood and Draper, the reconsideration of which also was voted by the senate.
