Paris Models and Model Coffee.

The same hands that make cheap dresses cannot design Paris models. Models come from those who make nothing else. It's true of anything—including coffee. Schilling is the only coffee roaster who does not try to make both cheap and good coffee side by side. Schilling is the only specialist in fine production. That's bound to result in better coffee.

LARGE CROWD IS ATTENDING CONFERENCE

24 bushels per acre. It was reported that peas do well in Union county but that there was no market at present for growing peas under contract. Mr. Withycombe, of the experiment station, was the authority for the statement that more pounds of peas were secured per acre than any other grain. It had been possible to secure as high as 25 to 30 bushels per acre.

The fact was brought out that if potatoes are worth $1 per hundred, they will bring more money in this section than any other crop. An increase in acreage is anticipated for 1931; it was reported.

J. D. Woodell, of the Lone Star district, reported on the subject of crop surplus. He presented the plan which has been worked out by prominent wheat growers in this valley and which has frequently been presented in these columns.

E. H. DeLong reported for the Union County Grain Growers association. He stated to the conference that the organization was a result of last year's conference and that $10,000 had been secured as a result of the loans and purchase at pegged price by the farm board.

W. E. Ruckman reported favorably on the efforts made by the county spraying machine on morningglories and recommended a similar process applied to Canadian thistle.

C. W. Bond has used sweet clover and alfalfa as a means of improving the soil. He stated that three to four years of legume cropping brings alkali land back to a state where it will grow grain.

Frank McKennon spoke on diversified farming, interpreting that as meaning legumes. The result of this type of farming were better fertility from legumes and manure.

Horticulture Sessions.—O. T. McWhorter, of the extension service, presented the "Fruit Outlook" as applied to this year as the first speaker of this morning's program. Mr. McWhorter suggested that it was a matter of opinion as to what will happen. He pointed out the prediction on present conditions. He stated that the depression in agriculture began with the stopping of loans to European nations in 1920 and the effect on the market for our products has since gradually accumulated. He believed that we might expect the recovery to be slow. The decrease in home population, Mr. McWhorter said due to use of tractors, has reduced numbers of horses to 10 to 15 millions and has thrown the land formerly used for producing horse feed, very largely to the production of wheat.

In the line of horticulture in which this locality is especially interested, sweet cherries and apples, he had found favorable conditions—healthy trees, few sprays needed, cheap land. He believed conditions were favorable in other localities also. The apple trees have decreased 50 per cent since 1920, he reported, and the number of trees is still decreasing. Although new orchards are also being planted, the industry as a whole is thought to be fairly well balanced in the relation of production to demand.

Alfalfa Seed.—In speaking of cherries, Mr. McWhorter stated that while California has 13,500 acres, Oregon has 5,000 and Washington a similar acreage of bearing trees in 1930. This represents the bulk of the sweet cherry production west of the Rocky Mountains. Oregon and Washington have secured most of the canning market in the past few years.

Tariff An Aid.—In speaking of the tariff, Mr. McWhorter stated that it was a distinct help to western growers. Due to low prices he pointed out that many orchards are being neglected. Only the larger yields of prunes for drying are found to be profitable at present, he stated.

R. H. Weatherpoon, the biggest apple grower in Eastern Oregon this year, marketed 85 per cent of his crop in Europe. He reported that he marketed at profitable prices, and secured more money than for stuff sold in the United States. To back up the statement that he grows a splendid line of apples, he passed apples to the entire conference—and they were good apples, too, all agreed.

As a special feature of the morning session, Julius Hug, at the piano, and W. F. Hug with the accordion gave some enjoyable musical selections.

Sheep Men For Cutting Grazing Charges In Two

Gerald J. Tucker, forest service, returned yesterday afternoon from attending a meeting of the Wenaha Wool Growers in Walla Walla, with some interesting reports of proceedings. A request that the grazing fees in national forests be cut in half was ordered sent the secretary of agriculture, for the wool growers, and a resolution, for support of the Norbeck bill in congress, providing a 10-year predatory animal control program, and request to the state to repeal the anti-wolf bounty law was passed. Mr. Tucker stated:

Shorter grazing seasons or reductions in the number of sheep feeding the ranges were given as two future courses of the forest service by J. P. Irwin, Umatilla forest supervisor, of Pendleton. Deterioration of the ranges in this forest which is unique in that it is entirely surrounded by suitable winter grazing lands must be stopped, the supervisor stated, and added that the water situation for the coming season is not encouraging. The Umatilla county watermaster reported all through there is half again as much snow in the mountains that the winter grazing lands as last year, Mr. Irwin stated.

Two inspections of the different sheep allotments or ranges will be made by the forest service, Mr. Tucker reports, and no permits for grazing will be issued until the first inspection has been made. Cooperation in the sheepmen in keeping the Umatilla forest ranges in as good a condition as possible was asked, Mr. Tucker added.

At the request of the U. S. predatory animal survey, spoke of the 10-year control program and stated that the loss from destructive animals in the U. S. Washington was $1,000,000 annually.

Postal Bill Passed.

The senate today passed the house bill establishing a 44-hour week for postal employees. The measure now goes to the White House.

The house rules committee today decided to allow the senate to vote on this session on the Clifford resolution to eliminate the "lame duck" sessions of congress.

The Clifford resolution would provide for an amendment to the constitution to permit a newly elected congress to take office within two months after the November elections. It also would permit a newly elected president and vice president to take office on Jan. 24.

The senate has five times overwhelmingly approved the resolution by Senator Norris, Republican, Nebraska, for abolition of the short session.

The senate foreign relations committee today voted down the motion of Senator Walsh, Democrat, Montana, to permit a newly elected congress to take office within two months after the November elections. It also would permit a newly elected president and vice president to take office on Jan. 24.

As a result, the protocol for American adherence to the court which President Hoover sent to the senate early this session is definitely shelved during the session.

The committee has agreed, however, that if an extra session of congress is called this spring, the court issue may be considered then.

Legislative right of way for the Wickwarham commission proposal to strengthen the liquor padlock law was accorded today by the house rules committee, thus increasing the chance for an early vote.

Approved By Committee.—The measure, one of four sponsored last year in the first report of the Wickwarham commission, was approved by the house judiciary committee.

The bill was designed to permit federal prosecuting attorneys to proceed with the transfer of ownership of padlock proceedings by serving notice through publication. It probably will be considered next week.

The senate today passed the bill authorizing the transfer of $5,000,000 from the treasury to the reclamation fund for carrying out the reclamation construction program.

Prepayments.—Sponsored by Senator Thomas, Republican, Idaho, the bill provides for repayment of the transfer to the treasury at the rate of $1,000,000 annually. The measure now goes to the house.

The McNary bill authorizing construction of a bridge across the Columbia river at The Dalles, Oregon, by the city was passed by the senate yesterday and sent to the house.

Alfalfa Seed.—WASHINGTON, Feb. 11 (AP)—The war department today allotted $135,000 for dredging Skipanon channel in the Columbia river in Oregon.

More Consumers Added To Lines Of Gas Company

Many new consumers have been added to the lines of Natural Gas Corporation of Oregon in this city, following the first service of gas which was made in La Grande on January 20, shortly after a number of gas appliances had been installed and were cut over, with proper adjustments made, and since that time a steady increase in number of consumers has been evident, according to R. D. Scott, local representative of the company here.

"Therefore, it is to those who had signed for gas," at the time construction crews laid the distribution system in this city," states Mr. Scott. "The new gas appliances are very attractive, and many new models are on display at our office, or may be purchased from local dealers if desired. In any event, we will be glad to lend any assistance to local consumers in taking early advantage of gas, through selection of proper appliances for cooking, water heating and the many other purposes for which this new fuel may be placed in the home."

OREGON PLAN OF EDUCATION IS DISCUSSED

The Oregon educational plan, from the standpoint of higher education, was discussed yesterday at the meeting of the Eastern Oregon Normal school, and J. T. Teachers, Normal school faculty members, school board members, and their wives were in attendance at the meeting, and the program which was prepared by Mrs. E. A. Miss Cleaver Relates Scenic Beauties, Hawaii

There is romance to teaching school in Hawaii, which is shown in the letters which Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Cleaver receive from their daughter, Eleanor, who is teaching her first year in Honolulu.

Unemployment is apparent there, too, Miss Cleaver states. "The plantation jobs are as scarce as the jobs at home. The plantations are financed by big concerns in the states so, of course, depression hits here, too. The boys work long hours, and there is no organization among the 'hailies' so the managers can work them as long as they want."

"We made the trip around the island Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday, and it was a revelation to say the least. In 70 miles one drops back 200 years, and that much time means something over here in a civilization that isn't much over 500 years old."

"After leaving Honolulu there is a series of lava flows around that side of the island. The edges of the flows are clearly marked, and the effect is of mile wide rivers, desolate and black, converging like the spokes of a fan. The west side of the island is very different from this. The road climbs midway to the side of a steep mountain. The water is a mile or two below. The entire mountain side is covered with small coffee fields, and the workers must have to hang from one field to reach the next below."

"We stopped in Honoanui. It was one time the home of Kamehameha, ruler of the islands, and is a large sand covered place, surrounded by a wall, and overgrown with palm trees. The landing place for his ancestors is still there. In the old days any one accused of crime could take refuge in the temple. The whole place is called a 'heiau,' a native temple. There are rock walls and platforms, and one large rock is said to be an altar where human sacrifices were made, but all that is left of these old temples is piles of lava rock and a few grass houses, but not many."

"Napoo was one of the most interesting places we saw. It hasn't changed its people since Captain Cook first saw it. I'm sure the old fellow who rowed up to Cook's monument was there at that time. These old Hawaiians never grow ugly; they are straight, have a hard 'sea' look, and seem ageless." She went out in a glass bottom boat and saw the waters which are the original home of the San Francisco earthquake. She says, "We looked through a glass bottomed affair at the most interesting sea gardens you could imagine, the kind you read of in fairy tales, with all colors and shapes of fish."

"You could look up the mountain side into the graves of the old Hawaiian chiefs. When a chief died a Hawaiian was let down by a rope from the top to hew out the grave. The burial hole was cut in the rock, and placed therein the bones of the chief with his possessions. After he had carefully concealed the tomb, the rope that held the burier was cut in order that knowledge of the burial place might never be revealed. These tombs were exposed by last fall's earthquakes. In some of the graves one saw the glimmer of white bones and caught glimpses of objects that had been placed there; for every hole there are the bones of a Hawaiian warrior under that gorgeous blue water."

Miss Cleaver also describes the lack of any American conveniences in any of the houses. "The beds are one thick quilt with a sheet pinned to it with large safety pins. The quilt is just the same size as the

Kingsley Placed In The Death Cell

SALEM, Feb. 11 (AP)—James Kingsley, 24, convicted of the murder of Sam Prescott, Ashland police officer, was received at the state penitentiary last night. He was immediately placed in the death cell to await execution at 8:30 a. m. April 3. Kingsley is the first occupant of the death cell for several years.

Kingsley was found guilty last week by a Jackson county jury and the death penalty was imposed upon him by Judge Norton. He shot and killed Prescott at Ashland.

A death watch is to be kept at the cell until the execution while in the day time his cell will be under observation of the chapel guard.
