Income Tax Facts

For income-tax purposes, there can be only one "head of a family."

A head of a family, as defined by income-tax regulations, is a "person who actually supports and maintains in one household one or more persons who are closely connected with him (or her) by blood relationship, relationship by marriage, or by adoption, and whose right to exercise family control and provide for these dependent individuals is based upon some moral or legal obligation."

The term "mentally or physically defective" includes not only cripples and those mentally defective, but persons in ill health, or those aged.

Thus, a single man who supports in his home an aged mother and two sisters 14 and 16 years of age is entitled to a total exemption and credit of $400.

However, does not apply to husband or wife, though one may be totally dependent upon the other.

It should be remembered that every single person, whether or not the head of a family, is required to file an income-tax return if his or her net income for 1930 was $100 or more.

The fact that the exemption may exceed the net income does not obviate this requirement.

Not infrequently returns are received from two or more members of a family, each claiming the exemption of $300 as the "head."

The exemption can be granted only to one person and it can not be divided.

HISTORIAN'S FIND REVEALS NORTHWEST'S 'LOST YEARS'

COLUMBIUS, Ohio (AP)—The shelves of an old library have yielded a history of the "lost years" of the Northwest Territory—that period in the new west between 1795 and 1803.

Charles B. Gathrecht, secretary of the Ohio archeological and historical society, found the book in the library of a friend who was unaware of its historical value.

It had been believed that the history, known to have been written, had been sent to Washington and there destroyed when the British burned the capital in 1812.

The authors of the book were Winthrop Sargent, later governor of Mississippi territory; Gen. William Harrison, later president, and Judge Charles W. Byrd, first federal judge of Ohio.

and how much he expects to pay for each item.

The applicant must state if there are any mortgages on his property. All these are natural questions and about what any bank would ask if the farmer was applying for a loan, but the storker is that the applicant is informed he cannot get a loan unless the mortgagee waives their rights on his crops so that the federal government will have a first mortgage.

Other Borrowing Prohibited

The government can not be on the crop and although the crop may exceed the loan and the farmer may know this full well, he is prohibited, under the phraseology of the blank form, to secure any other loans. Finally, the applicant must swear that because of encumbrances and what not he is unable to procure funds from any other source. The government is not taking his word for his necessity, even though he swears to the truth of it. His statements must be checked by local representatives of the department of agriculture, who must answer the question as to the applicant's general reputation.

As the Gilliam farmers wanted loans to conduct fallow operations, a special form may be prepared for them, but so far as known they will be handed a form such as has already been prepared for the drought-stricken area.

Senate Favors Old Age Pension Investigations

SALEM, Ore., Feb. 13 (AP)—What appeared in the debate to be strong opposition to Senator B. L. Eddy's old age pension investigation bill melted away when the measure went to vote and the senate passed the bill yesterday by a vote of 27 to 9. The negative votes were Senator Charles Hall, Gus C. Moser and Jay H. Upton.

The bill provides that the governor appoint an unselected commission to investigate the subject and report back to the 1933 legislature, the measure calling for a $1500 appropriation to cover the expense.

The opponents of the bill expressed themselves in favor of old age pensions, but favored a pending house bill that is a special order in that body at 2 o'clock this afternoon. It would provide for actual pensions of $30 a month for those qualifying under the act, and the senate opponents of the Eddy bill and others averred that the bill was desirable regardless of whether the house bill is approved.

Senator Upton declared that old age pensions were too important a subject "to be thrown into the discard by reference to a commission."

Senator Moser called the Eddy bill "a stab in the back at old age pensions." Senator J. O. Bailey attempted to get the bill tabled, but failed, and Senators J. E. Bennett, W. E. Burke and Halvor Wuehler made speeches in its favor.

Closing the debate, Senator Eddy rebuked Upton and Moser with a bit of sarcasm by remarking that "when subterfuge and roundabout dealing are as good as they, of course, are entirely innocent of those machinations."

Eddy said that the house bill would saddle a tremendous tax burden on the people, and that in Douglas county alone it would cost $90,000 a year. "If that bill passes," he said, "you need not be surprised if the people rise up in mutiny against taxation within the next two years."
