I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened; and another book was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works.—Rev. 20:12.

WINTER OPENS A DOOR
The fields take on their waiting look.
The trees stand listening
As if to hear far, far away
The first faint steps of Spring.

A NEVER-ENDING WAR
Ordinary rules of sanitation in the home and by municipalities are saving the lives of thousands of Americans annually and making virulent epidemics almost unheard of.

The first love story is recorded in Genesis. It is the story of a boy and a girl—and how he loved! It is one of the greatest romances of history.

What did he do then? He said to the father, "If you will give Rachel to me also"—plural marriages being permissible then—"I will work seven years more without pay for her."

Every human being is naturally curious, and it is a good thing that this is true. If it were not, we might still be living in caves and wearing bearskins, because it is through curiosity that man has acquired all the knowledge that has made our civilization possible.

A great deal of the joy of life consists in doing perfectly, or at least to the best of one's ability, everything which one attempts to do.

THE CRIME IN THE DUTCH GARDEN

SYNOPSIS: That Dr. Netherton or Marjorie Blake killed the girl Annabelle Quendling is the conclusion of the police superintendent, Richmond. Also he blames them for the disappearance of the spinner's will directing Marjorie in the event of marriage, Jimmie Howell, another doctor, who is also suspected.

A BROKEN ENGAGEMENT
THE news did not come altogether as a surprise. Jimmie had noticed that when the coroner was pressing the young doctor as to his feelings for the murdered woman's niece, Audrey by slight involuntary signs had displayed more than ordinary interest.

Jimmie found Richmond ranking under press criticism.

was that they did not wish Mrs. Netherton to feel that she was adding to Bill's financial burden by living with him and thereby delaying his marriage. "It will take longer to pay the debt, and that is the big thing we are working and hoping for."

Jimmie did not immediately reply. The girl's quiet words carried conviction that she loved Bill Netherton and that she knew Bill loved her.

"I am glad to know," he said, "I will do all I can to help you. Had Marjorie, to your knowledge, an attachment?"

Audrey hesitated. "I do not think so. She has always been popular and has had many friends. If Bill was an old sweetheart, that was also true of other boys around here."

"I understand. Could you not find out from Bill if there was any particular reason for his meeting Marjorie as he did? It is for his own sake. Both Bill and Marjorie seem to be holding something back, but if it could be shown that Bill loved you, it would clear things considerably."

Jimmie could see, however, that for the doctor suddenly to announce his engagement to another girl might suggest that he saw his daughter and took the step to save himself. There was silence for a few moments, broken finally when Audrey asked Jimmie if he did not think Green, the chauffeur, guilty. Jimmie asked her reasons.
