Health Talks

Headache in children is not a very common complaint, but when it does occur it is liable to point to serious underlying disease.

Headache in children under five years of age is even more rare and, when present, is not uncommonly the result of disease of the brain.

Children are not as competent as adults in describing their feelings or their ailments. Should they have head pains, however, their actions will be more revealing than their speech.

Young infants and children when suffering from head pains are prone to rub the painful areas, to cry, and to manifest marked restlessness.

Since children, especially younger ones, are not subject to the same mental fatigue to which many an adult's headache may justly be ascribed, their headache invariably points to the presence of underlying disease.

The most common single cause of headache in children over five years of age is eye-strain, perhaps due to school.

Japan's Growing Grip on Mindanao Alarms Filipinos

By E. W. Hoskins

ZAMBOANGA, Mindanao, P. I. (AP)—This island of Mindanao, second largest and one of the richest in the archipelago, holds within its shores some of the most pressing problems of the Philippine government.

It is the land of the Moros who in themselves have always been something of a problem. The other two chief factors in bringing the island into prominence are the Japanese and the move in the United States to restrict Filipino immigration.

A few months ago Eilemon Perez, secretary of commerce and communications in the Philippine cabinet, and Rafael Alunan, secretary of agriculture and natural resources, surveyed the island and reported to Governor General Dwight F. Davis that the rich Davao hemp district had become virtually a Japanese colony.

The Japanese, they said, have acquired large land holdings, almost monopolized the trade of the district and increased its numbers to 12,000 within a few years.

The report opened the eyes of Filipinos to the fact that if they did not themselves develop Mindanao, some one else would.

The island is, in fact, something of a frontier. Potentially it affords a wonderful outlet for the developing Filipino people, but thus far little has been done to take advantage of it.

It has been figured that if enough Christian Filipinos can be persuaded to take root here, it will help to settle the Moro problem in the crowded portions of the archipelago, and at the same time have a salutary effect upon the Moro, who has been made or less of a thorn in the flesh for 300 years.

Would Assimilate Moros

It is generally agreed that the best way to settle the Moro problem is to assimilate him or failing in that, to put so many Filipinos on Mindanao that the Moro will be a minority factor in numbers and influence. That would ultimately dispose also of the question of Japanese domination.

One of the great handicaps of this program is the government's lack of money to carry it out, and Filipino politicians refuse to amend restrictive land laws which make American capital fear investment in the islands.

Many Easterners Ask Information About Our State

"My last two cents went for the stamp on this letter." The foregoing statement was contained in a letter from a former resident of Williams, Oregon, now living in Arkansas, addressed to E. G. Harlan, editor of "Oregon Business." The editor goes on to quote from among the many other letters received.

"When the drought struck Kentucky, our famous blue grass was burned up as if a prairie fire had passed over our hills. No one knows if it will come back."

"For years my husband has bought apples for his Virginia cannery from the farmers in Shenandoah valley; last season he couldn't buy an apple on account of the drought."

"When the drought swept over Arkansas, business in rural towns was paralyzed; we got down to 88 when we wired relatives in Kansas City for money. When the telegraph company gave us their check for $250, no place in town could cash it."

Above statements were made by money. When the telegraph company president, Oregon State Federation of Women's clubs, while attending the national convention in Washington, D. C.

These are the reasons why Easterners are changing their ideas on federal reclamation and irrigation. Why big fruit and vegetable canners are looking across the Rockies to Oregon and the Northwest.

Why the Oregon state chamber of commerce is receiving thousands of letters from families with from $4000 to $10,000 seeking more desirable homes. And why the rail road immigration department in the middle states is receiving over 500 inquiries per month about Oregon opportunities and living conditions.

Never before did the Oregon county appear so desirable. Never before did it have such an opportunity to tell its story of comfort-living advantages to an interested and interested audience. And never before could effective salesmanship bring the dollars-and-cents return to every portion of the state.

Portugal Gives 'Lessons' To Aid Tourist Trade

LISSBON (AP)—The government of Portugal is going after tourist business in a big way.

It has undertaken to train guides, scenic hotels, staffs through a three-year training course and put out of business all hostels which do not measure up to an official standard of conduct.

Three governmental decrees have been issued to give this program effect. Portugal, like Switzerland, France and the six governments in the Balkan conference, realizes that foreign travel money can help her national purse mightily.

Explaining that the size and luxury of hotels counts less than efficient service by courteous attendants, the minister of the interior has ordered that all who would work in Portuguese hostels must go to school for three years.

French, English and German are among the subjects that will be taught. There also will be courses in hygiene, catering, bookkeeping and the general art of making the stranger feel at home.

But the schooling is not all. Each graduate of the course must give practical demonstration of his ability by putting all this theory into practice at approved hotels or restaurants, under the eye of government inspectors.

Guides also will get a strenuous training period. They must pass examinations in a complete course of history and geography and a mass of general information.

Another decree sounds a death knell for scores of squalid lodging houses, labeled "hotels." Existing hotels must be made and kept comfortable if they wish to hold their licenses.

To help these changes become effective the government has taken important duties of all hotel furniture and fixings that are not obtainable in Portugal.
