Knowing this first, that no prophecy of the Scripture is of any private interpretation. For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man: but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost.—2 Peter 1:20, 21.

THE MANLY MAN The world has room for the manly man with the spirit of manly cheer; The world delights in the man who smiles while his eyes keep back the tear.

THE MANLY MAN The world has room for the manly man with the spirit of manly cheer; The world delights in the man who smiles while his eyes keep back the tear.

HURRAH for the manly man who comes with sunlight on his face; And the strength to do and the will to dare and the courage to find his place!

GOLD In a little obscure valley high in the Canadian Rockies southwest of Calgary, Alberta, there has sprung up over night a tent town from which each morning men go forth to dig about on the slopes for that yellow earth man calls "gold" and for which he is willing to pay almost any price.

These prospectors are suffering cruel hardships without complaint, engaging in the most slavish form of labor, even risking their lives merely because last fall an old Indian found a lump of quartz in the mountains and showed it to two prospectors.

For months the tedious, back-breaking, spirit-crushing digging and washing has progressed without producing as much as a speck of gold dust but still they dig and hope. Blizzards, killing cold, hunger, disease and accidents are being risked for that pot of gold at the end of the prospector's rainbow.

But strangest of all, word comes out of the snow-covered Rockies that the bit of quartz picked up by the Indian has never been assayed. But that is gold fever. And if some of those men should strike it rich the world will talk of their "easy money."

A quiet home; vines of your own planting; a few books full of inspiring genius; a few friends worthy of being loved, and able to love us in return; a hundred innocent pleasures that bring us no pain or remorse; a devotion to the right that will never swerve; a simple religion, full of trust and hope and love—and to such philosophy this world will give you all the joy that it has.—Elbert Hubbard II.

The word "stop" in a telegram never yet kept a man from reading on to the end.

We are never thankful enough to the men who accept responsibility. Millions dodge it.

In Washington

By Herbert Plummer WASHINGTON — Estimated among his colleagues for his rare wit, his merry manner, and his kindness is the "gentleman in the wheel chair" — Judge Joe Mansfield, member of Congress from Texas.

Fourteen years in congress have made him a familiar figure on the hill, and a popular one. Now 70 years old, with another term in the house just ahead, he will find much in the seventy-second congress if the Democrats organize it.

For he would become chairman of that highly important committee of the house on rivers and harbors.

During the years he has been in congress, he has made this subject his specialty. He represents the famous gulf coast district centering around Corpus Christi. His advice is often sought when the question of rivers and harbors legislation is before congress.

In his whimsical manner he explained recently the origin of his interest in a subject of this kind. At least, he says it is the only explanation he can think of.

THE LOW-DOWN There has been an overflow of the river near his home. It was in winter, and huge quantities of ice were washed out on the public roads. He found it necessary to go to the mill, some six miles up the river, to have some shelled corn ground into meal for the family.

So he got out the family horse, put a two-bushel sack of corn aboard, climbed on himself, and started out. He found the road almost impassable. Half-way to his destination, he ran into an ice barrier six or considerable comment and debate as to the probable constitutionality of the act, although no definite opinion has been expressed, and state officials do not believe the matter will be taken to court.

Governor Meier. It was stated at his office, disapproved these items on the ground that the legislature took from him his prerogative of single item veto by placing the entire appropriation in one sum, and that it was the view of the office that because of this situation, the governor had the right to veto such items.

Interested officials searched records and supreme court opinions on precedence and rulings on partial sum vetoes, and found that in Oregon there had been no such precedent.

Opinions quoted included those from Illinois in 1915, which held such vote ineffective; Oklahoma in 1923 where a divided court held such executive action as a "rattle gesture" and ineffectual, making the entire item valid.

Other opinions were from Colorado in 1923, Arizona and Maryland in a Pennsylvania opinion in 1901 held that the governor had this right by interchanging the words "part" and "item."

The appropriation items vetoed by the governor, in addition to the $915,000 on the two items mentioned, included $40,000 for a new armory at La Grande; $30,000 for a mining and geological survey of state resources; $12,500 from the operating and maintenance budget of the institution for feeble-minded; $9,360 for salaries and operating expenses at the state penitentiary; $4,800 for an additional circuit judge for Multnomah county; $5,000 for a survey of forest resources of the state; $1,000 for capital outlays for the state supreme court; $900 annually for increase in salary of the Washington county officials; $600 annually for increase in salary of Deschutes county judge.

Horse, corn and rider slipped over a six-foot embankment into the river. When they came to the surface all were widely separated. The horse swam out on one side, Mansfield on the other, and the sack of corn floated swiftly downstream.

ARGUES IN PRIVATE Rarely does Mansfield speak on the floor of the house. He would rather sit and listen, then express his opinions in private where he believes they are more effective. He occupies a regular spot on the floor in his wheel chair to the right of the speaker's dais on the Democratic side.

A page wheels him to and from the capitol and his office. Once in the capitol, he propels himself around the corridors and in and out of the chamber. An illness years ago deprived him of the use of his lower limbs.

THEORE PIERCE St. Portland "My stomach was so acid I couldn't eat without suffering agony. I had a bad case of constipation; my sleep was restless; and I was tired and all in all during the day Sargon ended every one of my troubles, and I enjoy hearty meals, along with sound sleep, and feel fine all the time. Sargon Soft Mass Pills ended twelve years of constipation for me, and I never have to take laxatives any more. Sargon is the medicine I should have had at first." Sold by Red Cross Drug Store.—Adv.

Who Has Benefitted By Prohibition?

WAGE EARNERS—Wages in 1930 were twenty-five per cent higher than in 1918, though 1918 was the peak of wartime wages. (Note 1)

EMPLOYERS—With increased production, fewer accidents; one-third as many strikes—no more blue Mondays. (Note 1)

FARMERS—Who bought three times as much farm machinery, and sold forty-five per cent more milk than before 1920. (Note 2)

BANKERS—Forty-five million depositors have forty-eight billion dollars in savings banks—a sixty per cent increase over 1920. (Note 3)

INSURANCE MEN—Seventy million persons now hold life-insurance, amounting to one hundred and ten billion dollars—one hundred and thirty per cent increase. (Note 4)

REAL ESTATE MEN—Who have sold an average of twelve hundred new homes every working day of the prohibition era. (Note 1)

MANUFACTURERS AND RAILROAD MEN—Railroad earnings were more than six billion dollars (Note 5); manufactured products sixty-two billion dollars every year since 1925, which is more than war time earnings. (Note 5)

$300 annually for increase in salary of Umatilla county assessor, and $65.50 from state fund.

Among the more outstanding vetoes, in addition to the appropriation items, was the act which would enable the California and Oregon Power company to start construction on its proposed plant on Klamath river by transferring water permits to the new hydro-electric commission.

Other vetoes included prohibiting use of oleomargarine or dairy product substitutes in state institutions; the barber code; filling of legislative vacancies by the county courts; an additional judge for Multnomah county; appointment of tax collectors in counties; creation of new state game commission; and the new parole board provisions.

Seals' New Park Swings Open On Friday the 13th SAN FRANCISCO, March 13 (AP)—Gates of the San Francisco Seals' new baseball park, built at a cost of $1,250,000, swung open to fandom for the first time today, despite the old superstition concerning Friday the 13th.

The park is one of the largest and best equipped in the country. The right field fence is 394 feet from home plate; center field is 450 feet; and left field is 385 feet.

The seating capacity is 25,000 with 22,000 of the seats of the grandstand type. The 3000 bleacher boards will be in extreme right field. Lighting equipment of the most modern type was installed.

The most radical departure from the usual type of ball park is the absence of a roof. Owners of the Seals, Dr. Charles Strub, Charles Graham and George A. Putnam, determined the bulk of San Francisco fans chose the uncovered section in the old park, and a perusal of weather reports disclosed it seldom rained during the league season—April to October.

Starting batteries for the game were announced as: Detroit—Walter Hoyt and Wally Schand; and San Francisco—Sam Gibson and Earl Baldwin.

FOUR MAJOR ISSUES LINE UP FOR 1932

state liquor control in favor of national prohibition drew criticism from Democratic congressional leaders who are fearful of a party battle over this controversy.

Senator Robinson of Arkansas, who led the fight against the Hasbrouk prohibition proposal, has been advanced by his state legislature as a presidential candidate.

Ritchie a Prospect Governor Ritchie of Maryland, likewise has been put into the Democratic race by his legislature. He is for repeal of national prohibition.

Senator Lewis of Illinois, also has been formally entered in the Democratic presidential contest by his followers. He, too, is against national prohibition.

But democracy claims a host of prospect presidential candidates. Two New Yorkers—Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt and Owen D. Young—with Alfred E. Smith, the 1938 nominee, enter the discussion along with Senator Flax of Virginia, Newton D. Baker, James M. Cox, and Senator Bulkley, of Ohio, and a number of others.

Republicans have stood aside as the Democrats and their Progressives met. Hoover, Chairman of the Republican national committee, has announced the organization will get into "tight gear" before long and James Francis Burke, committee counsel, has lauded the work of President Hoover.

AIKEN, S. C. (AP)—The opening of the polo season here early in March is the signal for many leaders of the game to bring their best ponies out for spirited matches.

Tommy Hitchcock and Devereux Milburn are here this year and will be headlines in many of the tri-weekly games. Others here for the season include George H. Mead, honorary treasurer of the United States Polo association; Milton McCoy, H. Post, Regan McKim and Walter E. Eaton.

Pete Bowstick is expected to enter competition for the Hitchcock and Iselin cups late in the month. Winston Owsen and Harold E. Talbert also may come. All the fields here are in the best condition.

IF RADIO IS WEAR, SWITCH ON LIGHTS NEW YORK (AP)—Radio receivers powered through the lighting lines often suddenly increase in volume when a switch is turned on in the home.

This is due, engineers explain, to the fact that the lighting circuit, which is tied into the set through the power supply equipment, acts as an auxiliary antenna.

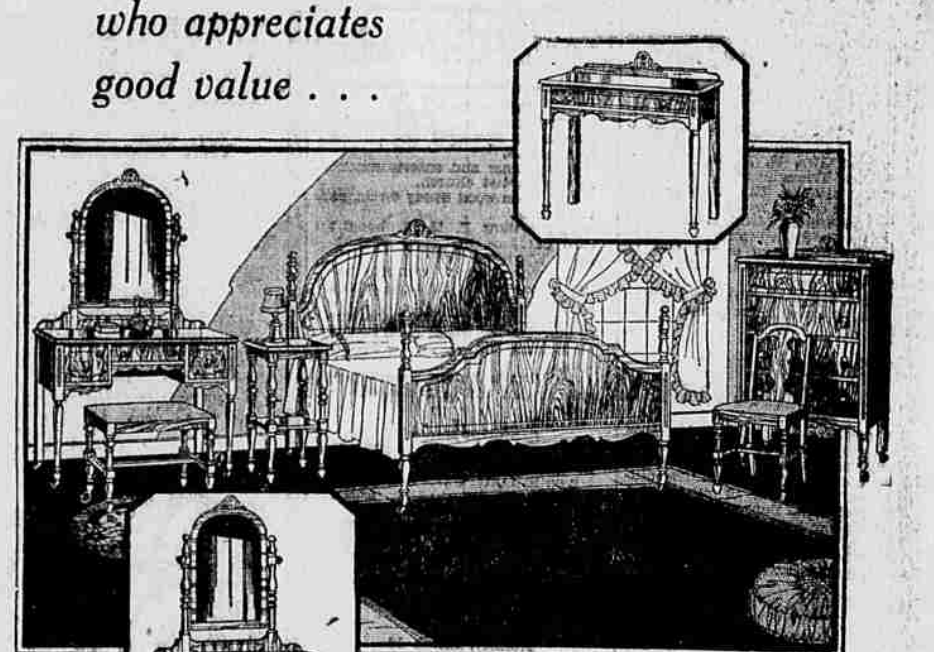

Turning on the switch, in effect, adds more wire to the pick-up circuit.
