Happy Valley—The Pleasant Grove grange play, "Happy Valley," presented at Summerville last week, was pronounced a huge success. The hall was crowded, so the profits were satisfactory to all. The greatest profit goes to the play cast—this profit is the enjoyment obtained from giving a home talent play, and giving it well. The Sewing club quilt was won by Leona Frizzell. The Unalut Camp Fire Girls sold all of their candy in a very short time.

Move to La Grande—Mr. and Mrs. John Woodell and their family have moved from Alice which has been their residence for a few years, to La Grande, where they will reside in the future.

Brothers' Night—Saturday evening was Brothers' night at Pleasant Grove grange. It is reported that everyone had such a good time that all the ladies hope the brothers will entertain often. After the regular session, Henry Fries took charge of the meeting. A peppy program of readings, songs, stunts and a grange paper was given. The "husband-calling" contest by the married women was a great success. Mrs. Martha Johnston winning the first prize. After choosing up sides, the men had a "shoe" contest. The losing side had to wash the dishes.

Supper consisted of apple pie a la mode and coffee. All took part in the old-time dancing after supper. All are keeping in practice for the old-time dance to be given at the hall on March 14.

Return to Washington—Mr. and Mrs. Charles Roehlitz and family have moved back to their former home in Washington state. For the past year they have been employed by N. K. West on his ranch at Pleasant Grove. They will be missed very much in the Pleasant Grove neighborhood as they have made many friends in the grange and in the school.

This Is Not China—You would think that this locality is a section of China by the way all of the newspaper reporters announced that Mr. and Mrs. William Perry of near Island City were the parents of a fine baby boy. The baby's name is Mary Joan, and she is a fine little girl—so everyone says, especially the grandmother Biokland for whom she must have

RECOMMENDATIONS OF 1931 ECONOMIC CONF. COVER DISCUSSIONS

LIVESTOCK REPORT

La Grande, Oregon, February 13, 1931

Fattening lambs offers an opportunity of marketing hay and grain but the expenses must be carefully watched. Care should be taken to buy feeders worth the money and through the feeding period every expense item must be carefully watched if one expects to make a reasonable profit from the business.

Experiment station results show that a 60-pound feeder lamb can be put in market condition on 100 pounds of grain and 300 pounds of alfalfa hay.

In marketing lambs it is recommended that growers produce lambs of only good uniform quality as rapidly as the ewes can be culled to bring about a better quality flock.

In shipping lambs to market they should be in uniform condition in so far as shrinkage is concerned. A shirt of 12 to 15 hours is recommended. Weighing some full and others empty is certain to result in dissatisfaction in connection with cooperative shipment.

Under present conditions livestock growers need to watch production costs and reduce them at every possible turn. It is therefore recommended that growers apply every possible plan that will lower their cost of production.

It is recommended that those interested in livestock in Union county consider the plan for a locally formed loan association.

Livestock Committee. Market Outlook for Farm Crops. Forecasts of wheat prices are of little value, either short or long time forecasts. Every one who tries such a thing is always made ridiculous sooner or later, due to new developments which cannot be anticipated.

The U. S. department of agriculture predicts a series of years with lower average prices than the period since the war. They base this belief on the fact that new machinery and new farming methods have extended the acreage of wheat faster than increased population can use it, thus accumulating a surplus which has been increasing from year to year for the past five years.

Other gloomy factors are the prohibitive wheat tariffs recently put on by many of the former importing nations and the possibility of Russia forcing on the market many millions of bushels of wheat which the soviet government has not bought but has set aside for sale. This Russian wheat, is offered at a low price so that others are undersold no matter what the price is.

Even if the balance of the nation should go to a domestic basis with wheat, the Pacific Northwest will continue to be a wheat exporting section as our location prohibits the shipment of wheat or flour to most of the United States. Apparently our only hope for better wheat prices either legislation such as the debarment plan or else a general world recovery of wheat prices.

The success of the debenture plan plot and they rot this and produce if it enough potatoes for their main crop the next year. This is a very easy and economical method of keeping good seed.

In order to make money from potatoes, growers should grow enough to afford adequate machinery. We believe a potato grower should not start unless he can grow 10 acres every year and 20 acres or more are better.

Flax can be produced here and eventually it should be as it has a higher value per pound than wheat and so one does not pay as much in freight charges. It yields only half as much as spring wheat, is worth, as a rule, twice as much, and has the same freight rate to Portland.

By growing flax instead of spring wheat a grower cuts his freight bill in two. The flax outlook for next year is dark as flax is used largely for paint and the market has been over-supplied due to inactivity in building operation. Low wheat prices in the middle west are apt to result in increased flax acreages. It looks like a poor bet for the coming year, but we urge growers to experiment with flax, learn how to grow it, and be ready to produce it when the market looks better. Two mills in Portland use about 500,000 bushels of flax every year and they buy this from Montana and South America, paying freight in one case and tariff in the
