Overheated rooms cause more infections than underheated. Cool off gradually if you are warm or wet with precipitation. Train your mind to stand changes in temperature by frequent bathing. Our present day life seems specially suitable for the propagation of respiratory infections in epidemic form. There is a greater need for reliable means of immunization against common colds, since prophylactic inoculation seems to be the only prevention likely to be applicable to give general protection against such common infection.

Mild Cold May Develop Into Flu, Pneumonia

By Dr. Frederiek D. Stricker
PORTLAND, Ore., Mar. 19 (Special)—A condition which develops into a mild cold in one person may develop into influenza or pneumonia in another. The actual causes of colds and influenza are not definitely known. All colds, flu, pneumonia, and pneumonia are communicable. They may be transmitted from person to person by close contact. Close contact means contact involving the same eating and drinking utensils, hand shaking, kissing, etc. Colds and influenza are the most communicable of diseases, and it is rare for a real case of these diseases to occur in a family or community that does not develop colds and influenza. These diseases spread rapidly in overhated gathering places and where human beings are brought into contact with one another. An ordinary cold may not cause sufficient inconvenience for the patient to remain at home. Influenza, however, is usually severe enough to keep a patient at home for several days.

Mrs. Martin, Of Cove, Sees Hotel Of Story Fame

By Mrs. Leona Price
(Observer Correspondent)
COVE, Ore. (Special)—Mrs. Nellie Martin, Cove telephone operator, is the job again. Mrs. Martin and her youngest son, Ned, returned Sunday from an extended visit with another son, Jay, of San Diego, Cal. This is the first vacation that Mrs. Martin has had of more than a few days, since she took over the phone office in October of 1918. She states that she is glad to be back in Cove, although she enjoyed her visit very much. During her stay in San Diego she rented a small house and made a home for her son. Neddy attended school and Jay is employed there. Almost every Sunday of her stay was spent in sight seeing trips among which were visits at Palo Alto, Imperial desert, Mojave desert, Caliente and Tinajuna. One Sunday was spent at the Barbara Worth hotel which was built on what was supposed to be the ranch of story book fame. It is in the Imperial desert and is air cooled to keep it livable during the summer months. Mrs. Martin and Ned returned from San Diego by train, leaving there a week ago Monday and arriving in Portland Sunday morning. They arrived in La Grande Sunday night. Mrs. Martin's daughter, Lola, brought them to Cove. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Harris, who have been in charge of the phone office during the absence of Mrs. Martin, will get her home for her several days.

Meier Endorses State Chamber's Settlement Work

PORTLAND, Ore., Mar. 19 (Special)—Governor Julius L. Meier has thoroughly endorsed the state chamber of commerce's request for funds from member chambers to continue land settlement and tourist work. The following letter by Gov. Meier was received by the chamber:

Ralph S. Hamilton, President
Oregon State Chamber of Commerce,
Benson Hotel,
Portland, Oregon.

My dear Mr. Hamilton:

I am deeply interested to learn that larger subscribers who have been supporting the work of the Oregon state chamber of commerce are meeting today to consider the finances of the organization.

To me this is far more than a question whether the work of the state chamber shall go on. It is a question whether the most successful movement for Oregon's development in many years shall continue.

The work to interest settlers in the lands and tourists in the natural beauty of Oregon as performed by the state chamber, has been carried on at a minimum of expense and a maximum of returns. It is almost a world record to be able to say that 5498 families have been located in Oregon at a cost of $40,000 a family and that every dollar spent in maintaining the Los Angeles office, which I originally suggested to the state chamber, has resulted in $140,000 of new capital invested in Oregon.

There must be effort in Oregon for this state's development, that embraces the whole commonwealth. Such effort properly belongs to the state chamber. It should be carried on with the cordial and sincere co-operation of all Oregonians, and all local business organizations including the Portland chamber of commerce.

It is not a time to reduce or restrict the program of the state chamber but a time to encourage and broaden it. Support previously given should be continued. Now sources should be made available. We are at the point of an upward swing in the affairs of Oregon and should be prepared in organized way to go forward.

I therefore hope for your conference today and valuation of the business and development value of the work done by the state chamber and urge that you put back of it not only conditions but the utmost of your influence.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) J. L. MEIER, Governor.

Summons May Be Served In Prison

SALEM, March 19 (AP)—The warden of the state penitentiary has no authority to prevent the service of summons upon convicts in civil or divorce suits where alimony or money consideration is involved, attorney-general J. H. Van Winkle held in an opinion handed down late yesterday. The opinion was requested by Superintendent Henry Meyers of the Oregon penitentiary.

It is a matter of no concern to the penitentiary officials, stated Van Winkle, whether the convict does or does not defend suits brought against him, and officials cannot prevent service of summons.

HOOVER BEGINS SEA JOURNEY TO THE CARIBBEAN

fair from the time Hampton Roads was passed. The Arizona was making a speed of 15 knots and expected to reach the Gulf Stream this afternoon.

The president stood on the quarter deck to receive the official salute and to hear the band play and he remained there after the ceremonies were over, enjoying the beauties of the seascape and day.

An army blimp, a squadron of planes and myriad harbor craft joined in the demonstration as the Arizona departed.

By Percival Christopher Wren Author of MYSTERIOUS WAY

"No, Doctor Theodore Charters. You don't remember the name, I'm sure. But you're going to. You're going to remember it as long as you live—and a bit longer perhaps."

Mr. John Ways was taken to a vacant room, and having retired to bed, fell into a deep sleep.

Concerning him, Dr. Charters held long and anxious cogitations with Mr. James, Dr. MacAdoo, the Matron of the Nursing-home, and Nurse Jones.

"Mr. John Ways" emerging from his room, proceeded in the direction of the great hall whence came the sounds of a song lustily banged by the butler.

Descending the staircase that led from the gallery, John Ways crossed to where the great Burmese temple-bell boomed beneath the blows of the padded stick.

Going down on one knee and applying his hand to his ear he achieved the pose of The-Listener. The butler ceased from his labors, and with lowered arm and jaw, regarded Mr. Ways.

"Dinna ye hear it?" asked the latter.

The butler swallowed and pulled himself together.

Chapter 4
MYSTERIOUS WAY

"THE law doesn't allow me to have any mad person here," replied Dr. Charters tonelessly, and with expressionless face.

"Not Well, all that's your trouble, Simmy, not mine. You must have me here under observation, then, but mind I don't get mad with you, Simou."

"And what about the nurses, pray?" asked the Doctor. "How

Conscience Hurts Income Tax Payer

TACOMA, Wash., Mar. 19 (AP)—Uncle Sam is 40 richer and some 1000 poorer in Seattle as a result of his conscience, as a result of a letter received by Burns Poe, collector of internal revenue, yesterday morning.

The letter, with a Seattle postmark, contained a five-dollar and a one-dollar bill and a sheet of plain paper upon which was written with a typewriter but three words: "Back income tax."

"It's a mystery to me," commented Mr. Poe. "I guess Uncle Sam can use the money."
