scribe what has grown to be one of the most distinctive things the national capital possesses. With the great dome of the capitol, the beautiful simplicity of the Lincoln memorial, the stateliness of Washington monument, the three miles of Japanese cherry trees, symbols of happiness or the sakura spirit of Japan, have found their place in the Washington scene. And it will soon be cherry blossom time again.

Again people will be coming from far and near to get a glimpse of them in bloom along the Speedway and around the Tidal Basin. Artists will be setting their easels under the blooming trees, endeavoring to put on canvas the reality of their blossoms. And, girls, clad in oriental costumes, will walk along the sea wall, holding over them Japanese sunshades.

Later a Dr. Jokichi Takamine, a Japanese chemist, visited Washington. Delighted to learn of the interest taken in his country's cherry blossoms, he was instrumental in having some 2,000 trees sent here in 1909. But when the trees arrived they were condemned as infected and ordered burned.

Dr. Takamine persisted, and two years later 3,000 trees were donated by the City of Tokyo. From these grew the new crop of blossoms that are to be seen now.

SIX WEEKS OF BEAUTY The first blossoms are the almost white and the delicate lavender and pinks, yellow, cerise. Some two weeks later come the deep double rose-pink blossoms, the piece de resistance of Japanese cherry blossoms.

There are at least a dozen species of the blossoms, varying in shape, size, color and time of flowering. The bloom, that they are really a kind of plum and their botanical name is "prunus pseudo-cerasus." The flowers closely resemble the Hawthorne blossoms on a "Hawthorne vase."

Last spring the Japanese Ambassador Katoji Debuchi and Madame Debuchi, with their son and daughter, were often pictured under the trees of their own country. The preceding spring, Miss Setzu Matsumura, daughter of the then Japanese ambassador, was especially the object of the camera because of her engagement to the young Prince Chichibu of Japan, whom she married that summer.

The veterans of the American Legion here have begun to receive their soldier loans. Cove has about 35 men who are entitled to varying sums, several have certificates for more than $1500. They have announced their intentions to put the money to good use, one veteran proposing to buy a home.

Charles DeHaas is remodeling his home. It was a two-story house and he is taking off the upper story, putting on a new roof and otherwise improving it. Walter Richards, of La Grande, is doing the work.

Two more houses in town are getting new shingles—those of John Valentine and Wesley Smith.

Mrs. E. E. Coad has been quite ill and unable to attend to her classes in the high school. Mr. Coad who was attending the university at Eugene, came home Sunday and is substituting for her.

English Pilot Dies While Doing Stunts

BOURNE, Cambridgehire, Eng., Mar. 20 (AP)—David Angell, young pilot of the Royal Air Force, was killed yesterday while doing aerial stunts for the residents of his home town. Angell's plane struck a tree in a field which belonged to his father.

Arrest Suspect In Brooks Murder Case

SAN DIEGO, Mar. 20 (AP)—Police early yesterday arrested Neal J. Marsh, 31, said to be an ex-convict, for questioning in connection with the kidnapping and slaying of Virginia Brooks, 10-year-old East San Diego school girl, whose mutilated body was found ten days ago on the Camp Kearny mesa.

Marsh, on January 31 last, completed a sixty-day sentence in the San Diego county jail for having attempted to strangle a Codomo woman.

Coroner Chester Gunn yesterday completed arrangements for the inquest into the death of the Brooks girl, starting today. Fifteen witnesses have been summoned, including the parents of the slain girl, the autopsy surgeon and sheriff's deputies, and police officers.

SYNOPSIS: Among the patients at Dr. Charters' nursing home is Marjorie Landerdell, who up to now has not understood why she became ill immediately upon meeting to her uncle's home. Her aunt, Mrs. Landerdell, was associated with Dr. Charters' during his American criminal career, but the doctor's secret seems hidden until a stranger confronts him and brings up his past life. Under Schiller's hand, the doctor says and demands that he be taken into the home and not into the street. Schiller agrees to admit "Mr. John Wayne" rather than be exposed as a crank. At breakfast next morning Wayne greets "Rosemary, Rosemary" when he sees Marjorie.

Chapter 5 INTRODUCTIONS

JOHN WAYNE tore his gaze from the girl and looked at her neighbor; and the Matron made introduction.

"Mr. Wayne—Colonel Campbell, our Oldest Inhabitant," she added. "Oldest Inhabitant!" snapped Colonel Campbell. "I'm still in my fifties."

"Ah," laughed the Matron. "I meant to say you're old."

"Monarch of the Glen," suggested Mr. Wayne, and began to recite.

"The stag at eve had drunk his fill."

"Have you seen my elephant?" Wayne asked the gatekeeper.

he said, a remark the less well-received by reason of the fact that all knew the Colonel to be a noted dipsomaniac who was learning the value of a dietary that included other things besides whisky.

Marjorie Landerdell, with a sharp look at Mr. Wayne, decided that he had spoken in all innocence—perhaps.

"Haven't we met before?" said a soft voice on Mr. Wayne's right.

"Mr. Wayne—Miss Skinner," murmured the Matron.

"Met before, what, Madam?" asked Mr. Wayne.

"Before this," replied Miss Skinner sharply.

"Yes, we have met before this assembly."

"Mad as a batter," chirped Miss Skinner, the rather cross-looking little lady, who sat on the other side of Mr. Wayne, and taking her empty plate to the sideboard, returned to another seat, as far as possible from the one who had vacated.

After breakfast, having read the morning paper with deepest interest, John Wayne, talking audibly and pleasantly to himself, strolled about the grounds of The Monastery, incidentally making a complete tour of the great high wall that entirely surrounded them.

The Monastery grounds were really an island with a moat about the wall, the only normal access to The Monastery being by the gatehouse bridge.

Beneath the archway, above which was a tower, high strong iron gates prevented access to the bridge itself, while at the far end of the bridge, a small door deep-set in a stone wall, prevented access from without, as well as egress from within.

It would be as difficult for an unauthorized person to leave this place as it would be to leave a jail.

A jail, John Wayne shuddered as he approached the great iron gates, a huge man came out from a door in the gate-house, and eyed Mr. Wayne inquisitively.

"Good morning," said the latter. "You haven't seen my elephant have you?"

"Elephant, Sir?" replied the man.

"Yes, Sir, in a manner of speaking. Yer see, Sir, there's some gents and ladies as might walk so fur that they couldn't get back 'less like your white elephant."

"Oh, well, if you're sure, I won't bother about it. I'll just go for a walk. If you'll kindly open the gates for me, I can go out if I want to, I suppose, can't I?"

"Why, certainly, Sir. Everybody comes and goes as free as air—when the Doctor says so."

"He tells you who may go out, and who may not, eh?"

"Well, Sir, in a manner of speaking. Yer see, Sir, there's some gents and ladies as might walk so fur that they couldn't get back 'less like your white elephant."

Alaska Town Nearly Destroyed by Fire

CRAIG, Alaska, Mar. 20 (AP)—Damage estimated at $150,000 was done by a fire of unknown origin which threatened the entire business section here early yesterday. Starting in Brown Brothers General store, the flames destroyed the building, the Craig Mercantile company, the post office, Cogo's store and residence, and Donnelly's store and residence. The fire also did some damage to Lucia's store.

No one was hurt. Volunteer firemen, aided by a favorable shift of wind, saved the remainder of the town.

DIES FROM LAUGHING

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Mar. 20 (AP)—Mrs. Ida Guzzie, 43, died of heart failure last night, caused by a paroxysm of laughter during a round of merriment at a party.
