And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them; and they were judged every man according to their works.—Rev. 20:13.

THE FIVE-DAY WEEK

The Progressives would eradicate unemployment by establishing a five-day week, which by their reasoning would effect a wider distribution of wealth. Perhaps it would, but there is also a possibility that it would aggravate present ills.

The theory is that there is only enough work in the United States to keep everyone busy five days a week, and that as long as some are working six days a week others will remain idle. Under this theory periodic depressions are inevitable.

In order to remedy the situation, the shorter working hour could not be accompanied by a corresponding reduction in total wages paid, since reduction of the laborers' earning power would also reduce their buying power, thus leading again into curtailed production and further unemployment.

But, from the employers' viewpoint, the paying of the old wage for less work would increase the costs of production, and result in the raising of prices. Higher prices would curtail buying power and again bring unemployment. There is a relationship between wages and consumption which no politico-economist can get around.

Shorter working hours would help solve the unemployment problem only if accompanied by more efficient production and lower production cost to offset the increased labor costs. Thus the problem really resolves itself into one of carrying America's industrial efficiency still farther, and going abroad in search of new markets for surplus goods.

We like to see people smile and hear them laugh, but not when we are changing an automobile tire.

DEEDS, NOT WORDS

One's life should be measured not by time but by service. It's history should be not so much a record of his words as of his acts. It's influence is not in proportion to his years, but to his righteousness. He has been of service to his fellows only to the extent that his deeds have been constructive.

It is not so much the evil things one has refrained from doing, as the good things he has done. Positiveness on the side of right gets him somewhere. It builds, it lifts, it purifies and ennobles. Quiescent good is not a force for right. It does no more good than it does harm — perhaps not as much.

Action is as imperatively demanded in mental and spiritual things as in material realms. Keeping silent will not comfort a friend who is overcome with grief. It is the friendly hand upon his shoulder, the sympathetic word in his ear, the act of helpfulness in his behalf, that renews his courage and drives away the gloom.

The negative man is a failure. He pulls back and makes it necessary for those who pull forward to carry his weight. He is a consumer, but not a producer. He uses the light, but creates none. The life of active service is the only happy life.

In Washington

By Herbert Plummer
WASHINGTON—Two honeymooners—Prince Takamatsu, second younger brother of Emperor Hirohito of Japan, and Princess Kikuko, his bride, are coming to the capital in April to spend a week or more.

Washington looks forward to their visit as a real event. For so deep has been the seclusion in which the Japanese have kept their ruling house, so many the safeguards and limitations on their movements, that it was not until 19 years ago that the first male of that family traveled outside the Land of the Gods.

With almost a year of their wedding journey behind them, they will land in New York about April 10. They come to Washington where they will be objects of much official entertainment, from the White House on down.

And rumor has it that while in America they will stop at those two lodestones of the American honeymoon—Niagara Falls and the Grand Canyon in Arizona. The original plans of their journey called for this, two stops, and they still may be included.

TYPIFY MODERN JAPAN
The prince is 26 years old. His princess is only 19.

An Associated Press colleague, who has just returned to this country after years in Japan and China, says that this royal couple "very truthfully typify the present-day life of their people, a life of strong contrasts in which modern ideas and ways find their place, for the most part with friendly adaptiveness, next to traditions and customs of the most hearty antiquity."

"The princess," he says, "is considered one of the most beautiful women in Japan."
"She has the stature, the figure and the self-possession carriage to wear the latest in Parisian costumes," I saw her when she drove with her

The Garden

Start looking around for good seed boxes to get an early start.

Look over the ash for the hotbed or cold frame.

Dig enough parsnips or oyster plant the first thaw to last for some time. It may freeze solid when you want them again.

Kale can be picked in the garden all winter. You might try a few plants another year.

This is the season of steam-heated gardening. It is done with a pencil, paper and ruler. You can't be sure of a good garden without planning it on paper.

If you planned your garden last year, reverse it this year if it proved successful. That will give a rotation so the same crops won't occupy the same ground again.

With the drouth in mind provide a better watering system this year.

Look over the garden tools and give them a coating of oil so they won't be dull and rusty when you want them.

If you never had a compost heap, start one. You won't again be without one. It's the handiest way of disposing of the pulled weeds and autumn leaves. It's a waste of good material to burn them.

Look over the bulbs and tubers in the cellar and if any are rotting remove the diseased portions and dust with powdered sulphur to prevent any spread.

While vegetables are important don't forget seeds of flowering annuals to brighten up the garden.

WALLOWA PERSONALS

By G. C. Meek
(Observer Correspondent)
WALLOWA (Special)—Many friends and neighbors of the L. V. Lathrop family from the Leap section attended the funeral of Miss Marie Lathrop here Tuesday. Schools here were also dismissed for the afternoon in order that classmates could attend.

John Stein and family who have been living on an irrigated farm a few miles east of Lostine, recently moved to their farm in the Leap community. They report road conditions quite bad in many places for hauling household goods and machinery to the farm.

L. V. Lathrop was a Wallowa business visitor the last of the week, making the trip by auto from his farm in the Leap section. He reports the road for a part of the way quite muddy.

Guy Downing, who is working for Dr. Gregory at his farm a couple of miles east of town, suffered a painful injury to his back recently while working with some hogs. He is unable to work at this time, however, he expects to be able to be back on the choring job again in a few days.

Joseph Feagins, of Leap, has been busy the past several days cutting wood.

Mrs. Bertha Taylor, of La Grande, who has been visiting the past week at the McKee home, returned to La Grande the last of the week. She has secured a job of Charles McElroy, of Middle Valley, and expects to start work there the first of the coming week.

John Bales and wife, of Leap, were visiting at the Joseph Feagins home Thursday evening.

Miss Laura Gregory, teacher of the Leap school, was visiting friends here and on Smith Mountain over the weekend.

John Couch, of Leap, was a business visitor in town the early part of the week.

C. W. Marshall, of Maxville, was a La Grande visitor the latter part of the week.

It may have meant something else to the Indians, but to the average woman shopper the happy hunting ground is most any department store bargain counter.

"At least," said the fellow with the mumps, "I'm having a gland time."

Royalty Coming To America On Honeymoon Trip

WASHINGTON (AP)—Japan's honeymooning prince and princess soon will visit the United States.

The prince, Prince Takamatsu, second younger brother of Emperor Hirohito of Japan, and Princess Kikuko, his bride of a year, who will reach New York from Europe about April 10 for a sojourn of six weeks in this country and Canada.

To Washington they will come soon after their arrival in America to spend at least a week. Boston, Chicago, and several other middle western and Pacific coast cities are included in their itinerary.

The 26-year-old prince, second in line of succession to the mikado's throne, and his 19-year-old bride, have smashed precedents of more than 2000 years in their honeymoon voyage around the world.

When they appear in public in their own country the princess keeps three paces behind her husband, conforming to Oriental custom.

Yet friends who saw them during their long voyage to Europe declared that this was a very modern marriage.

Princess Kikuko showed little or no awe of her lord and master, romped with him, tousled his hair, led him about, and in general, apparently had pretty much of her own way.

She is considered one of the most beautiful women of her kind.

Prince Takamatsu is the imperial family's representative in the navy in which he holds the comparatively humble rank of lieutenant.

He also has won time, however, for sports, and studies in sociology and economics. He plays tennis and golf.

Dies From Drinking Poison Moonshine

ELLENBURGH, Wash., Mar. 25 (AP)—A 19-year-old youth, whom officers knew only as Larned, died Sunday afternoon in a road camp on the east side of the Vantage bridge after he had taken a drink of moonshine, it was learned here yesterday.

Authorities believe the liquor contained denatured alcohol. The youth's parents are said to live in the Spokane valley near Spokane.

Larned took the drink from members of a road construction crew, five of whom said they bought two gallons of liquor from W. C. Rankin, commonly known as "Alkali Ike," who operated a service station 20 miles east of Ellensburg.

Rankin, admitting sale of the liquor, pleaded guilty to its sale in superior court yesterday and was sentenced to serve from one to five years in the state penitentiary.

All five workmen were ill. None of them knew Larned. The contractor immediately discharged the workmen.

Lumber Firm Sues For $500,000 Loss

PORTLAND, Ore., Mar. 25 (AP)—Charging that they spent $10,000 on a mill to receive lumber, and the defendant company then failed in its agreement to supply logs, the John Day River Lumber company yesterday filed suit in circuit court here asking $500,000 damages against the Chee Lumber company for asserted breach of contract.

The plaintiffs declared they lost $500,000 in profits since erection of the mill in 1929. The complaint said the Chee Lumber company had contracted to supply yellow pine logs for a five-year period.

TURKS BAR BEAUTIES FROM TEACHING POSTS

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP)—None of beauty's daughters need apply as Turkish school ma'tams.

Nashide Saffet, 20, a primary school teacher, won a beauty contest for the election of "Miss Turkey of 1931."

She was promptly notified to resign her pedagogic job or her beauty crown. She kept the crown.

That it is a teacher's duty to be as plain as possible is the teaching creed of the Kemalist authorities.

Duke of Newcastle Approves Marriage

LONDON, Mar. 25 (AP)—Though he never has seen the bride, the Duke of Newcastle said yesterday he had given his approval to the marriage in New York of his son, the Earl of Lincoln, and Mrs. Jean Banks Glimmerman.

"I have faith in my son's choice," the duke said, "he has had six months to think things over and he is a quiet, clever fellow, so I am not worrying."

London papers featured the announcement of the wedding, recalling that the youth not only had distinguished himself as an athlete, but acted last year as a trap drummer in an orchestra at a fashionable West End club.

FOCAL INFECTIONS

During the past 20 years a great deal has been written on focal infections.

Some have held these infections responsible for an extremely wide variety of ailments. Others have tended to underestimate their importance.

Accumulated medical experience has, however, served to establish a rational attitude toward focal infections. Certain it is that the reality of focal infections, and their ability to be a source of disease in remote parts of the body have been established beyond question.

By a focus of infection is meant a place where an abscess has formed, liberating germs, toxins or both into the body. Many different kinds of germs may cause focal or infection, which may be in different parts of the body.

The most common places in the body where a focus of infection may develop are the teeth, tonsils, sinuses, gall bladder, and prostate. But practically any portion of the body subject to infection may also become a focus of infection.

A focus of infection may injure remote parts or organs of the body by giving off in the blood or lymph stream bunches of germs or poisonous products of germ activity.

These germs or poisons may travel far and wide in the body and injure the kidneys, heart, brain, bones, etc.

Focal infections may thus give rise to arthritis or inflammation of joints, heart disease in different forms, such as endocarditis, that is, an inflammation of the inner lining of the heart; myocarditis, involving the musculature of the heart; pericarditis, involving the outer linings of the heart.

Nephritis may result from a focus of infection, and various forms of neurologic or nerve pains may also be due to the same source.

LITTLE TASKS

By Alice Judson Peale

It is a common falling among American children that they accept without thought of return the devoted services of their elders.

Girls and boys who grow up in homes where there is no servant never think of lifting a hand to help with the housework. They feel no responsibility to share in the effort that goes to make the home they enjoy.

This absence of a decent wish to be helpful can only be attributed to mistaken training. Little children
