Thou art righteous, O Lord, which art, and wast, and shall be because thou hast judged thus.—Rev. 16:5.

BARGE LINES The Louisville and Cincinnati Packet Line, one of the oldest steam packet boat lines in the country, has gone into voluntary bankruptcy after more than a century of operation.

The death of these river packets, one by one, is inevitable. In the business of transportation, speed is the greatest desideratum, and so the old packet boat, which splashed leisurely up and down the winding rivers, will have to go.

There is at the present time a movement on foot to establish facilities for barge service on various rivers, and those backing these projects would do well to note this latest failure.

Thomas F. Woodcock, a former member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, has stated forcibly that barge lines are not an economical form of transportation. He says the real question before the people is "whether they will continue to tax themselves to provide, for a small proportion of their number, water transportation for less than it costs and incidentally furnish unfair competition for the railroads."

A recent editorial in the Manufacturer & Industrial News Bureau calls attention to this same subject, and says: "The United States has never been provided with more complete, more economical and more efficient transportation than at present. The railroads, augmented by bus and truck lines, offer an incomparable service. And this service has been paid for and extended by private funds. The people of the United States pay twice for every waterway—first, in taxes; second, in forcing railroad retrenchment by further decreasing the vanishing railroad profits. Waterways have been taken up as a political issue—and every taxpaying American helps to foot the bill."

Leadership vs. Popularity Leaders and leadership have been reduced to a scientific formula by Dr. Donald A. Laird, of Colgate university. He has taken them apart and catalogued the ingredients.

His analysis substantiates the popular belief that leaders possess self-confidence, executive skill or organizing ability, energy, good judgement and the ability to shoulder big burdens and to delegate to others the little ones.

But he has found in some real leaders certain qualities which those who are accustomed to follow rather than lead would expect to find only in smaller men. They are not necessarily popular nor likeable. Often they are bad tempered, and indifferent to the opinion of others. They inspire confidence without inviting confidences, and their understanding of men exceeds their sympathy for them.

These studies emphasize the distinction between leadership and popularity. Popularity may invite imitation without leaving a lasting impression upon its times or posterity or leading others in a definite direction. Casual opinion often mistakes popularity for leadership and fails to discover the real leadership in unpopularity.

Dictators are leaders, but seldom popular.

In Washington By Herbert Plummer WASHINGTON—It would be interesting to know what books President Hoover carried along with him when he went to sea on the Arizona for a cruise to the West Indies. For the President rarely goes on a visit without being well supplied with reading material. When he first planned to return to Paly Alto, visiting the national parks en route, the Library of Congress was called upon for books of all sorts. There were volumes to explain what he would see in the parks. There were studies on economics that he might look into at other times. The president is described as one of the greatest book lovers ever to occupy the White House. And he is an ardent collector of books. Library authorities say that he has gathered a comprehensive collection of books in many languages on China and the Chinese people. These eventually were donated to Stanford university and became the nucleus of that institution's great Chinese library. His war library at Stanford is more evidence of his love for collecting. During the war, at every opportunity, he gathered documents, pamphlets, proclamations, periodicals or broadsides relating to the war, which in time will be foundation material for Eulogy Given By Rector At Phy Funeral Editor's Note: The following is the eulogy delivered by Rev. M. G. Tenney, rector of St. Peter's church, at the funeral services held for Dr. W. T. Phy, of Hot Lake. Dr. W. T. Phy was a citizen. His interest in civic improvement, in promoting clubs and movements to better conditions, as well as his very lively interest in politics were those of a leading citizen. He was a sportsman with a fondness for game and games. He was a fraternity brother. He was a fighter with a tongue for lighters. He had no use for the man who yielded to bad situations and went down a victim. He wanted the victim to be a victor, whether in sport or in life, he loved the victor. He was a man with conflict, great conflict in his life and men with conflicts must fight for victories. Through he experienced many conflicts, there was hardly a day at the close of which he could count his victories. He was fearless and proud. He could undertake where others faltered. There was no obstacle too great to be tackled, no problem too intricate for solution. His bearing was that of a proud man, one that could not admit defeat. He was too proud to be sick and he continued in his duties to within a few days of his death. He was a friend of the young. There are many who have been assisted through school by him. Many have been started towards success by him and thousands who have known his council and encouragement. He was a friend of the poor. There are thousands who have known the best of him and his staff, with the facilities of the Hot Lake Institution, could offer, without having paid. If a man came to him sick, he would nurse him until he was well. If a man was cared for. Many a person, sick, forsaken and dejected has received health, employment and a new lease on life at his hands. He was likewise a friend of the great. He was no respecter of persons. Foremost among them was Elbert Hubbard whose "Message to Garcia" he prized as a life's criterion. If you would understand why he went to Garcia and read "A Message to Garcia" for here was truly a man who could carry a message to Garcia. He was a friend of the farmer. Having been raised on the farm, his interest in agriculture was his birthright. He was a member of the Grange, the Dairyman's association and other organizations for the advancement of the farmer. His great diversion was his own farm on which he maintained one of the finest dairy herds in the state. He has done much to advance the dairy industry in the Grande Ronde valley. He was a son of pioneers and a pioneer. He ventured into new and unexplored realms in the medical profession and became a master of advanced methods. His advances in the realm of surgery have in many respects, been great contributions to the profession. This is especially true of the spinal anesthesia, his use of radium and some methods of conducting operations of a type. His diagnosis was most always true. Have you seen those hands, those miracle working hands? Those that have brought comfort to so many? In any one of his undertakings he excelled most ordinarily men, and the mystery of his versatility can be explained only by saying that this man was a genius, a great genius, and that all his purpose was to serve his fellows—a genius and a philanthropist. He died as he had lived, fighting and proud, giving of himself to the very last. While there are few who scoff at his great life, there are hundreds of "youngsters" who have lost their benefactor. This is Dr. Wm. T. Phy as I think he truly just and broad have seen him generally but I want you to see him as I have seen him. To me he was a giant, a head and shoulders above the crowd. In the race of life he was so far in the lead that the mass was hardly aware of his running. Yet, in his heart of hearts, he was a child. "Could you enter there, you would understand him. But few there are who have entered there and few there are who have understood him. We ordinary folks never understand genius. You have heard of the poet who said to say "Give me men to watch my mountains; to me here as a man who truly understood the mountains. I want you to think of him as a mountain. Giordana Mendum, a very obscure poet, has, in describing Mount Maund, an Indian name, taken a very meaningful "cleaver of clouds," given as a description which, to me, fits his man.

The News Used To Be:

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO (From Observer, Wed., Mar. 28, 1906) The electric light company was very poorly lighted, owing to the insufficient number of lights and the quality of the area used. C. E. Gillman and C. R. Seitz went to Elgin this morning, they have been employed on the engineering department of the new railroad.

TEN YEARS AGO (From Observer, Thurs. Mar. 26, 1921) All the churches of La Grande plan to take in large classes at the services tomorrow morning, Easter Day. The afternoon session of the superintendent's principal club is on to Elgin this morning, they have been employed on the engineering department of the new railroad.

ONE YEAR AGO (From Observer, Thurs. Mar. 27, 1930) Urging a general clean-up of property, Fire Chief C. T. Lindsey pointed out today that failure to clean off dry grass, brush and other inflammables resulted in fires later on that were costly to fight. Although the Republican and Democratic races for the gubernatorial nomination are so many, the primaries are attracting considerable attention over the state—here as well as elsewhere—local politics remain very quiet.

STORM OVER WITH CLOUDY WEATHER (Continued from Page One) cessation of snow fall in the Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, Northern Texas and the Rocky Mountain states. Snowplows both on railroads and highways were pushed throughout the night clearing transportation routes. Heavy snows were blocked by huge drifts. A search continued for Boyd Edwards, 7 years old, who had not returned from school to his home in Kanawha. Fruit growers and cattlemen were apprehensive over the effects of the storm. While the cattle losses in the panhandle section of Texas were not as heavy as at first reported, unofficial reports indicated severe damage to the stock. Indications in Colorado and Montana were that the storm had finished. Skies were clearing in Colorado and temperatures appeared to be moderating. Many persons reported missing were found safe. Trains into Kansas City from the Rock Island line between here and Denver. Airplanes were grounded.

TWO INCHES AT PENDLETON (From Observer, Thurs. Mar. 27, 1930) PENDLETON, Ore., March 28 (Special)—Two inches of snow fell here last night, with more in the hill sections. The weather was bright today and the snow was thawing rapidly.

HEAVY SNOW REPORTED (From Observer, Thurs. Mar. 27, 1930) Three inches of snow covered Wasco today, wheat ranchers desire heavy snow. There was no damage from freezing. Although blossoming apricot and peach trees were covered with snow, they were uninjured.

COVE PERSONALS By Mrs. A. G. Conklyn (Observer Correspondent) COVE, Ore. (Special)—The Nisiska Camp Fire Girls will have a council fire Tuesday evening, March 31. This group of girls gathered at their new building Tuesday afternoon, five of the girls bringing wood. Three of the girls, Velma Richards, Lona Nelski, Price and Phyllis Hancock were absent. At the business meeting their guardian, Miss Mae Hileman, showed them how to make two styles of bandages. The making of bandages

Sunshine, Snow Take Turns In Kamela District By Mrs. Bertie Riggs (Observer Correspondent) KAMELA, Ore. (Special)—Kamela has had changeable weather for over a week, varying between sunshine and showers, until Tuesday afternoon, when it started snowing and every one was very much surprised to find about four inches of snow on the ground Wednesday morning, with the continued flurries of snow and a cold wind blowing all day. Bad weather continued through the remainder of the week, with the snow following. Mrs. Bernice Denson returned to her home in Kamela Wednesday afternoon, spending three or four days in her home, visiting friends and relatives. Eldridge Tameris drove to Kamela on Sunday from Elgin to visit several days with Mr. and Mrs. Guy Tameris. Mrs. H. C. Hood and daughter, Arcella, were Pendleton visitors Monday where Arcella went for medical care. Mrs. Friendly Bartie Riggs and daughters, Betty and Melody, drove to La Grande Sunday to visit with Mr. Barnes. H. C. Hood, Kamela's engine foreman, is taking a two weeks vacation at his ranch in Amity. Mr. Hood will be relieved by Steve Ingerson. James Baker has been working nights for the week while Mr. Ingerson is on duty. Mr. and Mrs. M. Broma and Mr. and Mrs. Tom Burton drove to La Grande to spend the evening on Sunday. Oliver and Alva Casteel, who have been at work tearing down the building at Johnson's camp, completed their work this morning. Mrs. Steve Ingerson, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ingerson and son, Andrew, spent one day last week visiting in Elgin. Mr. and Mrs. Guy Tameris drove to Elgin Sunday to visit Mr. and Mrs. James Glasson. Mrs. H. J. Horstman spent most of this week in La Grande taking medical treatments. James Baker was a Pendleton visitor Friday. Erma Garter, "The Whirling of Life," Jean Baum, "The Heart of Old Hickory." In the extempore section others were Dorothy Poley talking an "Oregon Pioneer Churches and School" and Harold McCulley, "Leading Pioneer Statesmen of Oregon."

5 CHILDREN DIE OF COLD IN AUTO BUS (Continued from Page One) was badly frozen. He may die unless we can get him to a hospital right away." MAY USE AIRPLANES TURNER, Colo., March 28 (Special)—Efforts are being made today to get airplanes from Lamar to fly to Eads, Colo., and get the 18 Towner school children who survived the storm, in which five other children were frozen to death. Advice from Eads said all the children survivors had been gathered together in one farm home near the storm. The children would have to be transported to Eads, where they would be held for their lives. The children would be taken to the Maxwell hospital at Lamar, Colo.

Others participating in the interpretative section were Theo Lloyd, who presented "Nides, the Blind Girl of Pompey"; Erma Garter, "The Whirling of Life"; Jean Baum, "The Heart of Old Hickory." In the extempore section others were Dorothy Poley talking an "Oregon Pioneer Churches and School" and Harold McCulley, "Leading Pioneer Statesmen of Oregon."

LEGION LEADERS ATTEND MEETING (Continued from Page One) The department officers who attended the Elgin meeting expect to remain in La Grande until Sunday when they will go on to Ontario to attend the Interstate conference being held there on March 30, beginning at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, with the conference between posts of Eastern Oregon and Southern Idaho lasting until dinner time. Dinner will be followed by a free dance. Several legionnaires and the La Grande dray corps are planning to attend the convention which is being attended by Oregon posts in John Day, Dayville, Prairie City, Burns, Westfall, Jordan Valley, Ontario, Buxton, Union, La Grande, Imbler, Elgin, Wallawa and Enterprise, and by many posts in Southern Idaho. Judge Brady, in the capacity of district commander, will preside over the conference, while an Ontario man will be chosen as toastmaster for the dinner.

CHILD TELLS OF DEATHS IN BUS (Continued from Page One) finally stacked the seats of the bus up and set them afire. "Our lunches were gone and fell in the snow when the bus crashed through a fence and stopped, and so we didn't have much left. Miller said we were up against it and asked us to sing and wrestle to keep warm—anything to keep moving. "We stayed in the bus all night Thursday and at daybreak we found Louise Stonebraker had died some time during the night. Miller, who was wet through to his skin, took a sheepskin coat and started out in the snow for help. He left me in charge of the bus and said not to let anybody go to sleep. "Good-bye, kids," Miller said, "and pray that I'll come back with help." He waved at us and soon had disappeared. A short time later Mary Neeley, who was huddled in the back of the pile, (we all huddled together, it got so cold) stretched out limp on the floor. She was dead. Children Hysterical "The rest of us got hysterical then. One of the kids broke the window of the car by accident. We could not keep out the cold air. The kids then were so cold I couldn't get them to move. I started some boxing matches but they didn't last. I noticed my brother Orlo, was freezing. I gave him all my clothes except my underwear. "After a while I was so weak and exhausted I couldn't keep awake. I laid down in the pile with the rest of them, and started to doze. I was not discouraged but so weak I couldn't do a thing. "I don't remember anything after that until I woke up some time this morning near a stove in Mr. Reinert's house."

Imbler Baseball Squad Expects To Win Pennant By Mrs. Ray Wilson IMBLER (Special)—With the largest squad in the history of the school, 31 in all, working for places on the Imbler High school baseball team, Coach King has high hopes of winning another championship. Although some excellent men were lost by graduation from last year's championship, new material is plentiful and the indications are that a few of the lettermen may be displaced from this year's team. The battery for this year is occasioning some concern. However, Carol Wagner, last year's shortstop, seems to be filling the bill as receiver and what he lacks in experience he makes up in pep and enthusiasm. Buck Fowler, from last year's 8th grade team, is also making a strong bid for this position and is a close second to Wagner. The pitching staff is bolstered by the addition of Don Brown, a letterman of two years ago, who is again eligible. New men showing to advantage in this department are Dorman Jackson, Keith McKinnis and Charley Lewis, who filled the bill last year in the championship game against Enterprise, when the veteran, Ledbetter, took suddenly ill. In the infield, King has Smith, Masters, Howell, Holmes, Lewis and Wenzkow, from last year's squad, and Elton Frizzell, of the freshmen, showing to best advantage. The outfield will no doubt be taken care of by Cole, Woodell, Pottratz, R. Fowler and Conklin. Many others are turning out and still have a chance to break into the limelight. Imbler will try to break the winning streak and no competition is expected. Imbler plays its first game against Cove on March 31 at Imbler.

Consideration Of Forest Road Now Indicated PENDLETON, Ore., Mar. 28 (Special)—Friendly consideration of the county court's request for forest service cooperation in building the eight mile Weston road is indicated in a wire just received from Senator McNary but it looks like the subject must await the annual meeting between state, county and federal officials. The senator's telegram is as follows: "Again referring to your interest in the Weston-Elgin road, forest service advises me as follows: "The regional forester at Portland has informed us that the grading and surfacing of the Weston-Elgin road between McDougall and Tollgate was completed last summer. Efforts are now being made to improve the highway immediately to the west and a petition with the state highway commission for a change in the western terminus of this project. The recommended terminus is the intersection of this road with the Basket mountain road. As you are aware, the road conferences represented by the state highway commission, bureau of public roads and forest service consider all recommended additions to the approved forest highway system. Such a meeting has not been held since Umattila county filed its petition. The regional forester is fully aware of the importance of this project and I am sure that he will see that every consideration is given it when it comes up for discussion at the next annual meeting." CHAS. L. MCNARY, U. S. S."
