New Process An Outlet For More Oregon Cherries?

OREGON STATE COLLEGE, Corvallis, April 6 - Perfection of a maraschino process which may provide profitable outlet for the growing surplus of Royal Ann and other white cherries in Oregon is announced by the horticultural products division of the Oregon Experiment station. The process is the result of two years research by H. E. Wiegand, head of the division, and D. E. Bullis, assistant chemist.

Most of the American supply of maraschino cherries in the past has been imported under formula held as trade secrets. In recent years some demand has arisen for brined cherries, which is the first step in the maraschino process.

The experiments here have resulted in perfecting improved formulae which will soon be published for the general use of the fruit canning and preserving trade. Hundreds of tests were run to determine the best bleach, the best hardening solution and other treatment to cut down the loss from cracking, and otherwise give an attractive product.

Already The Dalles Cooperative Growers plant and two canneries in Salem have put the new method into commercial practice on a limited scale with entire success. It has been found that the waterhouse cherries and other small sized sorts that have heretofore been severely discounted are equally suitable for processing for maraschino purposes.

The experiment station men are now carrying the tests a step farther and attempting to complete the entire process of bleaching, hardening, dyeing and flavoring in the original barrels, thus avoiding loss from damage in handling. Indications are that this plan will prove successful.

Imbler Boy Will Participate In E. O. N. Contest

By Mrs. Ray Wilson (Observer Correspondent)

UNION (Special) - Nine students entered the elimination contest held last Wednesday afternoon to determine the student who would represent Imbler at the declamatory contest last Friday evening in Imbler. In the third, fourth and fifth grades division Betty Crouser won for the non-humorous and Aetha Bushman in the humorous. For grades 6, 7 and 8 Ruth Hale won in the non-humorous and Lyle Coe in the humorous.

The winners Friday evening were: Mildred Harry, non-humorous; Jack Cummings, humorous, for grades 3, 4 and 5. In the 6, 7 and 8 grades division, Ruth Merritt won the non-humorous and Lyle Coe the humorous. Lyle Coe is an Imbler boy and the others are from Elgin. Schools competing in this contest were Elgin, Pleasant Grove, Dry Creek, Summerville and Imbler. This is the first event of the kind ever held here. These winners will compete at the Eastern Oregon Normal school on April 10 for the county championship. A large and appreciative audience was in attendance at the contest here.

The high school student body held a dance in Wade hall Saturday night. All classes were well represented and all report having had a fine time. Supper was served at 11 o'clock. The Hit and Miss orchestra supplied the music.

A number of Imblerites journeyed to Mt. Glen Friday night to attend the dance given by the M. I. A. at that place. The enthusiastic reports of those who made the trip will no doubt result in a larger delegation from here at their next dance.

The third and fourth grades had an Easter egg hunt Friday afternoon. The deep jungle surrounding the schoolhouse was the scene of the hunt. Prizes were awarded to Richard Wilson for finding an especially marked egg which was hidden in a very secret place and to Leola Rollins for finding the most eggs. Refreshments were served in the school room after the hunt.

Edward and Harold Van Vlack discontinued school in Imbler last Friday. Their parents are moving to Elgin and the boys will continue their studies in the school there.

Owing to the opportunity presented by the extreme high flood stage of the river, for the study of geological factors involved, Mr. Johnson took those students of the high school interested in this study of nature on a field trip Wednesday morning. Nearly the entire student body responded to the chance to learn a little first hand geology and classes were suspended in part for a period of a couple of hours. The results as shown from the tests taken and the enthusiasm of the students proved it was time well spent.

WAYE'S LIFE "INSURED"

"SURPRISE me?" replied Dr. Studley, and he laughed. "I'll absolutely guarantee you against that, my dear Sir, if you are nervous. And so, I'm perfectly certain, will Dr. Charters and Dr. MacAdoo. I'd like to be sure that I'd live to reach the age that you will."

"Thank you, Doctor. You reassure me completely. . . . Do you know, I'd actually got into my head that I might be found dead here, one morning. Silly of me, wasn't it?" and John Waye smiled pleasantly at Mr. James and Dr. Charters. "I feel perfectly certain, now, that I shan't die in my sleep, or be taken suddenly ill and die here, or be Waye ill another cigarette."

"That's all, Studley, thanks," said Dr. Charters, and winked heavily to his colleague, as one sane man who conveys to another acknowledgment of their mutual appreciation of a difficult situation.

Decidedly puzzled, Dr. Studley retired.

"No, Simon," observed John Waye as the outer door was shut, "I don't think I shall be found dead and I don't think I shall disappear - to the bewilderment of my Solicitor and Banker, not to mention Sir Bernard Matthieson - and I don't fancy you'll give me up to justice."

"Look here, my clever friend," said the Doctor, his voice quiet and monoling, "supposing that, on the one hand, your health remains good here and, on the other hand, the police don't tear you from us, exactly how long do you propose to give us the pleasure of your company?"

"Well," considered Mr. Waye. "I couldn't tell you anything definite beyond this - I shall most certainly be with you, my dear Doctor, until this poor fellow is hanged for the murder of Mr. Theophilus Webb of Witherby End. . . . And now that the police have got him, I feel quite certain that he will be hanged, for I left on the spot evidence confirmatory of what I wrote, and most incriminating. . . . Yes, I shall certainly be with you until he's hanged."

And with a nod and a smile, Mr. Waye strolled away into the grounds in search of Marjorie Laidler, whom he had begged to meet him in "The Ruin," the beautiful remains of the ancient Abbey Church, once the chapel of The Monastery.

Dr. Charters and the confidential members of his competent staff looked at each other in a discomfort bordering upon consternation.

"And what d'ye know about that?" inquired the Matron.

"Looks to me like he gets away with it," answered Nurse Jones.

"So long as he gets away from here. . . ." said Dr. Charters.

"But did you ever, in all your young lives, ever hear of such wickedness?"

"Hump him off, I say," interrupted Mr. James.

"There are occasions when the administration of your one and only panacea is not indicated. . . ."

"Your observations are apt to be monotonous, Jimmy," continued the Doctor wearily. "Do you suppose that man will remain - er, unbumped - for one minute after circumstances render him - er - humpable? Be patient, my boy, and you shall get him."

"If you don't wait till he gets us," grabbed Mr. James.

"Well, you leave it to me. He can't and won't, do a thing until this other guy is hanged, or the whole affair blows over and is forgotten. Then he's over and to make his getaway. . . . And when that time comes, perhaps we'll start some thing bad for the health of Mr. Mysterious Waye."

"We certainly don't want him visiting here again," observed Dr. MacAdoo. "If he were taken ill here, later on, and stayed with us for good - under the old yew tree - we'd feel safer."

"True enough," agreed Dr. Charters. "But I'd feel safer if he left

Ask Opinions of Education Heads

PORTLAND, April 6 (AP) - At the next meeting of the board of higher education in the office of the governor in Salem, April 20, presidents of Oregon's institutions of higher learning will present a brief on the report issued recently by the United States office of education.

Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall, president of the University of Oregon, and Dr. W. J. Kerr, president of Oregon State college, were instructed to file a brief on this report. The board voted to call Dr. Arthur J. Klein, chief of the division of collegiate and professional education and head of the commission which surveyed the state schools.

Dr. Klein will be asked to come to Oregon at once.

The motion by Mrs. Walter M. Pierce of La Grande, asked that the presidents of the two institutions set forth their opinions on Dr. Klein's plans, for presentation to the board.
