COVE SCORES VICTORY OVER UNION, 29 TO 3

By Mrs. J. R. Price
(Observer Correspondent)

COVE, Ore. (Special)—Cove scored heavily against Union in the second baseball game of the season played Friday at Cove. The score was 20 to 3. The first game played with Imbler there was lost to Imbler high.

D'Arcy McCool won first place in the declamatory contest at La Grande Friday evening. He received the medal and will be among those eligible to enter the contest at Arlington.

Each of Cove's four entrants took one of the three places. Merril Orton received a red ribbon taking a second in his division and Robert and Billy Duncan each received a white ribbon signifying third place in the respective divisions.

Miss Lucile Peck, who is attending the E. O. N., was at home for three days. School was closed during the teacher's convention in Spokane.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Fisher, who bought the Townley ranch of 700 acres early in the winter, moved to their new home last week. Mr. and Mrs. Fisher have lived on the Harris French ranch below Cove for a number of years.

The Union county Ministerial association will meet at Cove April 20. The Cove Ladies Aid will prepare the dinner for the visiting clergy.

J. B. Love returned to his ranch at Cove last week. Mr. Love spent about four months in California.

Saturday April 18 has been set aside as clean-up day by the Camp Fire Girls and the club women. The club will clean its lot next to the library and the girls plan to clean any place in need of it. This is not the annual city clean-up day, however.

J. R. Fletcher, whose ranch lies three miles above Cove, has been losing a number of sheep which have been killed by coyotes. He lost two some time ago and three more recently.

Mrs. Lucy Gardner left Saturday morning for a visit at New Plymouth, Idaho, with her daughter, Mrs. Mack Saunders. Mr. Saunders came to Cove Thursday. He and his family are well known in Cove having lived here until about four years ago.

Work to Bring '32 Legion Convention

PORTLAND, Ore., April 14 (AP)—To discuss ways and means of bringing the 1932 National American Legion convention to Portland, representatives of chambers of commerce, railroads and [illegible] of Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Montana will meet here next Monday. This announcement was made by W. M. Biggs, Hermiston, Oregon department commander of the Legion, following a conference of the national convention committee here Sunday.

Biggs said the entire Pacific Northwest would be solid behind Portland's bid for the convention. Sunday's conference will follow the two-day legion child welfare conference in which 11 western states, Alaska and Hawaii will be represented.

In Washington

By Herbert Plummer

WASHINGTON (AP) — No appointment made recently by President Hoover has met with more general approval, perhaps, than that of William R. Castle Jr., as under-secretary of state.

For many persons thought that "Bill"—as he is known in Washington—was slated for this post at the beginning of the Hoover administration. It turned out, however, that the late Joseph P. Cotton was given the job, and Castle continued as assistant secretary of state.

So when the president announced his appointment there was general rejoicing—especially at the state department.

Few men in Washington officialdom enjoy the widespread popularity and esteem that Castle does.

EARNEST WORKER

He works quietly, steadily and earnestly. The door to his office is seldom closed. Often those having business at the state department wholly without Castle's jurisdiction stop in his office and talk it over with him.

He keeps two folders on the top of his broad desk. One is marked "routine." The other is labeled "not routine." The other is labeled "not routine." The other is labeled "not system he employs in the discharge of his official duties.

His recreation is confined almost entirely to swimming. He endeavors to take a plunge in the pool at the Racquet club on Sixteenth street, next door to the abandoned Russian embassy, once a day in both winter and summer. He is also fond of walking.

NEIGHBORS

He and Mrs. Castle move in a select social group in the capital. In the days before Herbert Hoover became president, the Hoovers, the Reeds (Senator and Mrs. David Reed of Pennsylvania), and the Castles comprised one of the outstanding neighborhood groups in Washington.

The three families had homes near each other in an exclusive part of Northwest Washington. This neighborly spirit has grown to the extent that Senator Reed and Castle have built homes recently near each other on beautiful Kalorama Hill, just a few doors above the Hoover home, where the president lived when he was secretary of commerce.

Nearing 53 years of age, Castle was an instructor and assistant dean of the college at Harvard before he came to Washington. For two years in the capital re directed the bureau of communications for the American Red Cross. In 1919 he went to the department of state where he was acting and later chief of the division of western European affairs. In 1927 he was made assistant secretary of state.

He was born in Honolulu in 1878, his father being the last minister of the republic of Hawaii to the United States.

MYSTERIOUS WAYE

BEAU GESTE
BEAU IDEAL

SYNOPSIS: Dr. Charters tells Dr. MacAdoo and Mr. James that he has abandoned his plan of poisoning Marjorie Lauderdell so that her aunt, Maud Lauderdell, might gain her fortune. But James, who thinks Charters has been double-crossing them, decides to get the girl's fortune for himself by marrying her. Enraged at his intrusion into her room, Marjorie scorns his offer to get her out of the home if she will accept him. Nurse Jones appears and ludicrously shows James into the hall. Calming her jealousy, the nurse—secretly James' wife—agrees to provide poison so that he can get her out of the way and obtain Mrs. Lauderdell's 10,000 pounds for himself. John Waye, the mysterious patient does a little detective work when he hears a night prowler in the corridor near his room.

Chapter 25

DR. CHARTERS' SON

SWIFTLY he opened his door and crept into the corridor.

Stooping low, Waye caught a glimpse of the outline of a dark figure between himself and the tall window that framed the star-spangled sky. Rising, he crept swiftly in its direction. It disappeared. Touching each door as he passed it, he came to one that was ajar. Softly pushing it open, he said:

"Come out," and stood aside, his left hand raised and leveled.

Scarcely had he done so, when the dark figure reappeared between and the window at the end of the corridor. Instantly a beam, alone from a tiny torch in Waye's left hand, and almost instantaneously his right hand shot forth—a blow delivered with a skilled athlete's strength, enhanced by the irrepressible fury of long pent rage.

The heavy fist, crashing upon James's jaw, drove his head against the stone wall. Without a groan he sank to the ground.

"You damned dog," whispered Waye, and, not gently, stirred the inanimate form of Mr. James with his foot, ere removing the black handkerchief that was tied about his face.

There was a movement within the room; the door was opened.

"What is it?" asked Marjorie.

"Sah! It's all right. [illegible] Waye, putting his head into the room.

"It's that negro," she said.

"Yes [illegible]

Turning to her bed, Marjorie caught up the jug of water.

"We can't leave him like this."

And, kneeling beside the prostrate man, she sprinkled water upon his face and hands.

"Don't, child," protested John Waye. "I hate to see you touch the reptile. I'll drag him [illegible]

"Get me the glass," said Marjorie. "I believe he's dead."

With a shrug John Waye fetched the glass of water from the [illegible] bedside table.

"Pour a little more in his hand and head," she directed. "Now take him up a little."

Mr. James stirred and opened his eyes, groaned and closed them again.

"Drink some water," said Marjorie.

Semi-conscious and faint, "What the hell?" sighed Mr. James, and drank.

And, as the man and girl watched him, Mr. James jerked [illegible] sat up suddenly, glared at the glass and at the girl and [illegible] hand; clutched his throat, [illegible] with horror, and cried:

"You've killed me, and on a visit! Confession twisted his [illegible] died—poisoned by the draught he had himself prepared.

Seizing Marjorie's trembling hands in a firm, steadying grip, Waye soothed and comforted her. "He really died of the blow I . . ."

"Rubbish," interrupted the girl. "I'm all right now . . . I understand. He came in here and poisoned the water in the glass. I drank a glassful before I went to sleep, and poured out some more . . . It was quite all right before I went to sleep."

"Dress at once," Waye said. "We're going now. Get ready quickly, and just bring what you must."

"I'll be ready—but don't be long . . . And can you take that away?" she added, with a shuddering glance at the bent body.

"Leave everything to me."

Closing the door behind him, Waye, within the minute, had flung Mr. James's body on Mr. James's bed.

Sister Weldon was a light sleeper, and tapping at her door brought her out of bed and into dressing-gown and slippers.

"Sister, it's time for us to act," Waye said as she opened the door. "The man James went into Marjorie Lauderdell's room and poured poison into the glass of water on her bedside table. I caught him com-and knocked him down [illegible] going into the girl's room at four in the morning.

"Marjorie came out and insisted on trying to bring him round, gave him the water in the glass to drink.

"It killed him. I'm going to tell Charters what happened."

"Can't I do anything?" she inquired.

"You can, Sister. You can get the girl out of this house and take her to your brother. I'll come with you."

"Certainly. I'll ring up Levitt at the sale house, and tell him the car is to be on the road, in five minutes, and that I shall be taking two patients away. He'll obey me as he would the Doctor himself. He'll be perfectly content to [illegible] as soon as I have [illegible] in the Ventnor [illegible] she turned from [illegible] it's all right un [illegible] I could, no, not until you and Marjorie are out of the house," interrupted Waye.

"I've got something to say to him. Something that's got to be said. If I don't join you within ten minutes don't wait for me."

Dr. Charters sat up, instantly wide awake, as his light was switched on, and a harsh voice said:

"Get up!"

"You! What's the matter?"

"Murder's the matter. You [illegible] reptile [illegible]

The Doctor sprang out of bed.

"Murdered?" he cried.

"No. Punished for murder. Come with me. His room . . ."

Charters dashed ahead of Waye up the stairs and threw open the door of James's bedroom.

In a few seconds his professional eye told him the worst, and, as Waye entered the room, he saw the execrable man suddenly burst into tears and heard him, with rend[illegible] sobs, cry aloud:

"Oh, Jimmy! My son! Oh [illegible] my son!"

[illegible] Waye—recapturing [illegible] for Marjorie. But [illegible] they leave on a long journey together.
