Heavy Overhead— Oregon institutions spend 89 per cent of their total income for overhead and business administration, as compared with 5.8 per cent for Nebraska and 4 per cent for Ohio. The Oregon figures have undoubtedly been increased by the addition of a sixth business office, that set up by the state board of higher education with an executive secretary at a salary of $7,500 a year and his clerical staff. A reduction of one per cent would mean an approximate saving of $90,000 per year. We should lower this cost by three or four per cent, and save the state $300,000 per year.

The report deals at length with the matter, stating that at the present time five different systems of management handle the business of Oregon's higher institutions of learning. Each of these systems has its own policies, its own procedures, its own records and business forms, its own methods of report making. In no two instances is it possible to determine the amounts spent for a general class of expenditures, with reasonable assurance that the statements embody all the same type of costs. The report continues at the same length with the matter of waste in the present unassociated and independent conduct of business operations among the five separate institutions. Among the governor's statements were:

"According to the survey, a large proportion of our paper comes from the mills operated at Eugene and Monmouth, has been wasted through poor planning and management of the building programs. It is estimated that there are elements of waste in the present unassociated and independent conduct of business operations among the five separate institutions. Among the governor's statements were:

"Duplication of extension activities, lack of cooperation in research, the duplication of the organization of intercollegiate athletics are also indicated by the survey to be important fields for substantial re-orientation. "Worthy of special note, also, is the waste due to the low percentage of utilization of building space in all school plants. The concentration of classes in the forenoon, the making of Saturday practically a holiday, and the small size of the buildings, are some of the reasons why the average Oregon Normal shows a student use of 13.2 per cent; the Eastern Oregon Normal 23.7 per cent; the Monmouth 24.7 per cent; the University of Oregon from 13.1 to 32.5 per cent, and the college plant from 5.8 to 45 per cent.

"Both the university and the college are operating extensive printing plants. Why not abolish these and have the necessary printing done in the state printing plant?"

"Dealing with co-ordination of extension activities of the institutions: The problem, therefore, becomes one of suggesting a central institution that will utilize all the resources of the state institutions at points and in ways which will be non-competitive, economical and efficient. The answer to this question is suggested by the implications of the query 'what would be done with reference to the state at large if the institutions were under single administrative control?' The problem is one of service and not that of recruiting students to the various institutions for institutional measures."

MEIER GIVES POINTERS TO STATE BOARD (Continued from Page One) that only half of the expected number graduate within the four year period.

"This indicates that our large attendance is abnormal and wasteful, and that high pressure methods of student recruiting are inducing many to enroll in institutions who are not able, financially or scholastically, to complete the curriculum.

"Each student costs the state of Oregon $276.00 a year, which in itself is $82.07 per student in excess of the rate for the country at large. Included in our enrollment are 1,613 students from outside the state of Oregon. The survey suggests that
